Did You Know

By Pat J. Kirwin

THAT the first high-wheeled bicycle owned in Chillicothe made the trip from Circleville to Chillicothe in less than three hours, a fact published in every weekly paper in this section of Ohio. The rider and owner of the bicycle was George Crouse Tyler, of Chillicothe, and the theatrical world, who has just published his autobiography and theatrical reminiscences, under the title "What Goes Up—The Hazardous Fortunes of a Born Gambler."

This book is stuffed with great names and great events from James G. Blaine down to Mussolini, but to the residents of south-central Ohio, whose memories go back through the gay nineties, it is a panorama of their own time, seen through the eyes of a neighbor boy. To those interested in the theatre, and the great names connected with it, the book becomes alive and is the gallant record of a man to whom the theatre was a glorious way of living life to the full.

A condensed version of this book appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, the complete volume being much richer in interest and anecdote. The Circleville Public Library has just received a copy of the book and those interested in reading it will do well to call the library promptly, to insure the opportunity of borrowing it.

That 60 years ago this fall, fire, which originated from a cigar, destroyed the broom corn sheds and warehouse of Edward Smith. The buildings were located in the southwestern part of the city and the total loss amounted to more than $20,000. Three sheds, a warehouse, and a dwelling inhabited by Noah Barnes, colored, were swept by the blaze.

???

That religion came first and the baseball game on down line in Sabbath day importance in 1874. An article in The Herald of the time relates: "The usual game of baseball did not take place Sunday afternoon west of the gas works, because several of the players were detained later than usual at Sunday school for not being able to recite their catechetical lesson."

???

That 41 years ago, Renick Dunlap, son of Nelson J. Dunlap of Kingston, and former assistant secretary of agriculture during President Hoover's administration, was a student at Ohio State University. He had just received a promotion in the University's R. O. T. C.

???

That in December, 1893, Scott Boggs sold his 280-acre farm in Pickaway-town to Samuel H. Ruggles for $21,000.

???

That the "dungeon prison" in the basement of the city building was condemned by a board of county visitors 41 years ago. A report submitted by the board in that year stated: "The city prison is a dark, damp underground room, not fit for a storage room, much less a prison. It is so vile that a majority of the board members refused to step inside." Members of the board were Francis Reichelderfer, Hattie A. Bostwick, Sarah A. Heffner, George H. Fickardt, Seymour R. Van Meter and Missouri Millar.

That "The Circleville Window Glass Workers' Fishing Club" was the name of an organization composed of the younger employes of Circleville's glass works, which was formed in 1893. A social group, the organization enjoyed a number of dances and masquerade parties.

Two Stabbed With Bayonets in Soldiers' Hands

TOLEDO, May 26.—A mass meeting of strikers was called for this afternoon immediately following a conference of federal labor mediators which was scheduled to start this morning.

It was expected that a new peace plan would be submitted by the labor mediators at the strike meeting for approval.

TOLEDO, May 26.—While strikers refused to ratify a peace pact that was designed to end the bloodiest labor riots in Toledo's history, Ohio National guardsmen

COLUMBUS, May 26.—The state of Ohio is paying approximately $3,500 a day to maintain the 1,000 National Guardsmen now in duty in the Toledo strike area, it was estimated today at the office of the adjutant general here.

Two persons were stabbed with bayonets in hand-to-hand struggle with rioting mobs.

MANY BOMBS USED

In combating the latest outbreaks which started at noon yesterday and ended at midnight, the guardsmen used hundreds of tear and knockout gas bombs and frequently fired at the heads of rioters.

They fed them their own medicine and hurled bricks thrown by strikers back at them. Rioters

TOLEDO, Ohio, May 26.—Heywood Brown, New York columnist nearly took a patrol wagon ride early today.

He was in the crowd of strikers at the Auto-Lite plant when the guardsmen made a sortie into the mob and surrounded a few of them.

Brown was among those marshalled to a patrol wagon but was spared the indignity of a ride when he was able to identify himself. He had stopped off here on a tour.

not to be outdone caught tear gas bombs thrown by guardsmen and hurled them into ranks of soldiers.

Every time rioters scored a hit there was frenzied cheering from the mob of four thousand that has besieged the lines of the militiamen. Shrieking sirens of patrol wagons, ambulances and fire trucks answering false alarms gave a weird touch to the confusion in which two score were reported

SKINNER ASKS SCHOOL HELP

Claims Public Education Has Broken Down in Some Parts of State.

COLUMBUS, May 26.—The state department of education is carrying its campaign for Ohio school financial relief directly to the public, it was learned today.

Frankly alarmed over the existing financial conditions of schools

SCHOOL OUT TUESDAY

Superintendent E. L. Dale said Saturday that schools will be closed Tuesday with pupils to return Friday at 3 p. m. to receive their report cards.

throughout the state, Dr. B. O. Skinner, state director of education, revealed today that he has dispatched a "letter of information" to all Ohio school superintendents.

The letter, which outlines the financial status of school districts, is accompanied by a request that the information be distributed directly to the public and that the public be called upon to bring pressure to bear upon members of the state legislature to provide prompt school relief.

Dr. Skinner urged that the material be laid before the state senators and representatives "so that they may understand that the operation of schools during 1934-35 is dependent upon their action." He offered to provide speakers for meetings to be arranged in local communities.

The letter from Dr. Skinner was distributed in the state at the same time that Joseph A. Fichter, assistant state director of education, sounded the warning in an address at Mt. Vernon that "public education has broken down in some sections of the state," and that "many schools face the prospect of keeping their doors open for only part of the next school term."

Bowman Formally Sentenced Saturday; Stay of Execution Seems Certain.

HARRODSBURG, Ky., May 26.—Formal sentence to die August 2 in the electric chair at Eddyville state penitentiary was pronounced today upon Neal Bowman, convicted slayer of a bandit pal, in Mercer circuit court here.

The doomed gang chieftain was assured a longer respite, however, when Judge K. S. Alcorn allowed until October 2 for filing of an appeal, which will automatically stay the execution. Motion for a new trial was denied.

Bowman, convicted of shooting to death Comer Franklin and throwing his body into Herrington lake, heard the sentence without show of emotion. Judge Alcorn voiced "regret that a man of your intelligence should have turned to this mode of life."

It was the first death penalty decreed in court here since the Civil war.

In pleading for a new trial attorneys for Bowman charged perjury was created by the open display of firearms by the prisoner's guards in the courtroom.

Shackled and machine gun guarded, Bowman was brought here by automobile early today from the State reformatory at Frankfort and immediately being sentenced was returned there to await the outcome of his appeal.

SIX CANDIDATES FOR GOVERNOR TALK HERE

Brown, Elden, Haigler, Harrison, Morgan, and Sparks at G. O. P. Rally

OTHERS THERE, TOO

"Party Harmony" Stressed by All Speakers

Urged to follow the battle-cry, "Party Loyalty," through the election this fall 200 persons, nearly all of whom were Republicans, participated in a county-wide rally Friday at the Pickaway Country club. The meeting was sponsored by the Pickaway-co Republican club of which Sterling Lamb is president.

Marion Sensenbrenner, candidate for representative to the general assembly, was toastmaster.

Not only did the county Republicans hear the pleas for loyalty to party causes but today they are studying the relative qualities as far as they can determine them of all six of the party's avowed candidates for the nomination for governor.

ALL SIX PRESENT

The candidates included in the order called upon by the toastmaster: Clarence J. Brown, of Blanchester; John C. Elden, of Cleveland; Charles E. Haigler, of Washington C. H.; Frank Harrison of Massillon; Daniel E. Morgan, of Cleveland, and C. Nelson Sparks, of Akron.

All were permitted eight minute talks.

Other state candidates introduced were George C. Braden and Ralph Emmons, for secretary of state; Mrs. Lottie Randolph, of New Lexington, running for state central committeewoman from the 11th Ohio district; Tom White, of Fairfield-co, candidate for congress from the 11th Ohio district; Mrs. Helen Black Anderson, Salt-creek-town, present committeewoman from the district; Misses Hilda Burns and Hulda Redd, candidates for the nomination for county treasurer; Ray W. Davis, present prosecutor seeking re-election, and C. Edward Wright, seeking the nomination for county commissioner. A delegation from the state treasurer's office, guests of Former Mayor B. T. Hedges, were also present in a group.

The speaking part of the program followed a dinner served in "The Old Barn" by Ralph Barger, country club steward.

Every speaker on the evening's program stressed the need of loyalty after the August primary. Excerpts from the 8-minute talks of each of the gubernatorial candidates follow:

ALL SIX QUOTED

BROWN: "The chief issue of this campaign is 'Can the government be returned to the people?' It is certain the government of the great state of Ohio has not been in the hands of or in the interest of the people of the state. But the government has been used in the building of a vast political machine. The state highway department has millions on its hands now and it is keeping this money, but just wait until this fall prior to

The Chinese Presbyterian church of San Francisco, California, has celebrated its eightieth birthday anniversary.

The Catholic church is launching a drive to rid the country of salacious motion pictures; organized crusades enlisted twenty million people have already begun their work; pledges are being signed not to attend motion pictures which offend decency and Christian morality.

Delegates from many nations are now being chosen to attend the world Baptist Congress in Berlin August 4-10. Berlin authorities are willing to co-operate in the Congress arrangements.

Episcopalians have just celebrated in Philadelphia the 150th anniversary of the series of meetings in that city which led to the organization of the diocese of Pennsylvania and the establishment of the Protestant Episcopal church in the United States.

Another Christ of the Andes is being erected on the mountain border between Chile and Peru. It will commemorate the end of a 50 year old dissension between the two countries which began with the War of the Pacific in 1879 and ended with an arbitration in 1929 in which the United States had an important part. The other statue of the Christ in the Andes was erected in 1904 to mark the settlement of a boundary dispute between Chile and Argentina which lasted 55 years.

As a result of some 40 professional men meeting Jan. 1, for prayer together a new religious movement has developed. They organized themselves into a League of Prayer seeking to promote prayer, Bible study and personal recruiting for Christ's cause. When the League was heard about, people from over the nation applied for covenant cards. The news of the movement was sent to every English daily printed in the world and the response has been overwhelming. An office has been opened in the National Press Building, Washington, D. C., and the Christian Crusade was duly launched.

When is it right for us to judge one another?

Why are we more prone to criticize others than ourselves?

Under what condition is salvation by works justified?

What principle is the basis for the separation of the good from the bad?

What is the highest reward for Christian service?

What causes and institutions need support in the light of this lesson.

Clericus says, "A life of love shall be perpetuated and shall lose itself in the life and love of God. Judgment works no change in the other world but simply declares and emphasizes what has been in this world."

Lesson Prayer, "Help us to remember that God is a lord of justice as well as of love; forbid that we should live careless lives and presume that his love will allow the wilful neglect of our love and our life in obedient service."

What Part Ought the Church Take in the Healing of the Body?

Christ did much healing and commanded his disciples to heal the sick. The healing ministry was practised by the early church and then relinquished partly because of the fake faith healers who exploited people to their own ends. There is need for the church to understand better the cause of today's ills and sickness and where there are causes other than physical that produce mental and physical disorders, to seek the reasons. Much has been written helpful to the church on faith healing by such men as Dr. Elwood Worcester, Dr. Samuel McComb and Dr. Sadler.

The church ought to specialize in those healing concepts of the Christian faith and those basic doctrines of God in his universe which will induce happy adjustments of inevitable situations, putting about all perplexities an atmosphere of personal trust and intuitive understanding. Many are suffering from unfulfilled aspirations, thwarted desires, inadequate notions of life and God and nursing maladies too deep-seated to be touched by drug or scalpel. To illustrate a wrong concept of God may produce suffering and real agony; when death takes a member of the family, to think of God as having caused the death is

1. The Judge (v. 31).

He is the Son of man, the one who came and died to redeem the human race. At this time he is seen clothed with majesty and power sitting upon his throne acting as judge. There is no judgment, so far as sin is concerned, for those who now accept Jesus Christ as their Saviour (John 5:24).

II. The Time of Judgment (v. 31).

This judgment will take place when the Lord comes in his glory accompanied by a retinue of glorious angels, and after he has gathered the elect remnant of Israel. There will be no resurrection in connection with this judgment.

III. The Place of Judgment (v. 31).

The prophecies of Joel (2:1-17) and Zechariah (14:1-5) show that it will be in or near Jerusalem. The angel said to Mary, "Thou shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great and shall be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David. And he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end" (Luke 1:31-33). As David was a literal king and reigned at that time a literal king occupying a literal place of judgment.

IV. The People Judged (vv. 32-45).

It is expressly declared "before him shall be gathered all nations." They will be the nations left upon the earth after the church has been translated (1 Thess. 4:16, 17). These are the nations to whom the gospel of the kingdom shall be preached just prior to the coming of the end of this age. "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come" (Matt. 24:14). This gospel is distinct from the grace of God which is now being preached. The preachers of this gospel will be the Jews (Rev. 7 and Rom. 11). They will move among the nations of the earth with the startling news of the Lord's approaching kingdom.

V. The Issue of the Judgment (vv. 32-46).

Some of the nations will gladly receive the message of the kingdom and most kindly receive the King's messengers. Others will persecute them, thrusting them into prison. Here those who receive the message will visit the messengers of the King and provide for their wants. At this time the judge will separate the nations, placing the sheep on the right hand and the goats on the left. The sheep are those who give proper treatment to Christ's brethren, the messengers of the gospel of the kingdom. The goats are those who reject the message and maltreat the messengers. If these three classes, the sheep, the goats, and the brethren be kept separate in our thinking all confusion will be avoided. The sheep will enter upon the inheritance of a prepared kingdom. The goats will go into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels (v. 46).

Good Motto

"May our Keswick motto this year be 'Each for other, and both for God'; husband and wife, each for other and both for God; pastor and people, each for other and both for God; brothers and sisters, each for other and both for God; sweetheart and friend, each for other and both for God."—Bishop Taylor Smith.

McClarren and C. C. of A. Game Week's Highlight

The feature of next week's recreation ball contests comes on the last day of the week's schedule when the Container Corporation ball club takes on the McClarren Meats, a rampaging, slugging, but error-making ball club, on Thursday evening.

The McClarrens have lost one tilt, that to the Mecca by one run after a real battle. The McClarrens still claim they should have won that because Merle Davis scored the tying run while his brother stood in the pitcher's box with the ball. Davis was sent back to third, however.

The Straw-board outfit is certain to use Pud Oliver on the hill and it is just as certain that if there is one team in the league that can get Puddin's well-known 'goat' it is this McClarren Meat outfit. They will probably ride Oliver from the going hoping to send him into the zone with his speed ball.

The McClarren game is the only one on the remainder of the schedule for the Straw-board which is expected to test that outfit with the possible exception of the Mecca Restaurant.

Other games of the week find the Given Oils and Eshelman Feeds mixing on Monday evening, Circleville Oils and Circle City Purina Chows on Tuesday evening and Mecca Restaurant and Purina Chows on Wednesday evening, or afternoon, it not yet being determined.

The old ball league is going along in nice shape with the Straw-board and Mecca Restaurant outfits the only ones undefeated. The first half will end when every team has played every other team once. Then the second half begins.

TWO TURF CHAMPIONS

LORD JIM, 2, 2:05 1/4 (Parshall Up.)

Two turf champions. Lord Jim, 2, 2:05 1/4, present favorite for the $40,000 Hambletonian Stake to be raced in August, winner of six of his seven races in 1933, and his trainer-driver, H. M. "Doc" Parshall, for six of the past seven years, leading race-winning driver of America. This pair will be seen in action at the opening race meeting of 1934, to be staged this week at Urbana, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

White Qualifies In Four Events

Howard White, Ohio Wesleyan's one-man track team, kept his school in the running for the Buckeye Athletic association title, Friday afternoon, by qualifying in four events.

They include 100-yard dash, 220-yard dash, 120-yard high hurdles, and 220-yard low hurdles. Running true to form, Miami university, favorite had qualified seven men in the preliminaries.

Finals are to be run today. Ohio University, defending champion, became more of a threat, however, by qualifying eight men.

Ames Oliver, Miami Negro sophomore, qualified in both hurdles. Bob Ulrich, of Ohio Wesleyan, turned in the best time in the high hurdles, winning his heat in 15.8 seconds while Oliver coasted in to a 16.3 second win in the other heat.

Gene Broxon, Ohio University flash, turned in the surprise performance of the day by winning the 100-yard dash in 10 seconds flat and by capturing the 220 in 22.7 seconds.

As the teams entered the finals today, Miami still remained the favorite to win the championship, although Ohio University may nose in again this year. Wesleyan is generally conceded third place and Marshall and Cincinnati probably will battle for fourth.

GRUNT ARTISTS GO TO BUCKEYE LAKE

BUCKEYE LAKE, May 26.—Big League wrestling will have its inaugural at Buckeye Lake on Decoration Day in the evening when a program of three bouts, bringing together leading stars of the mat sport will be presented at Chrystal Pool.

One of the most unusual arenas in the sport world is to be constructed for this series of matches. A big 24 foot ring is to be constructed right out over the water in Chrystal Pool and on this unusual battle ground the smashing stars of the mat will grapple.

"Silent" Rattan of Houston, Tex., who is now making his home at Buckeye Lake will meet Stacy Hall, brilliant Ohio State athlete in the main bout of the first program here Decoration Day.

"Father" Lumpkin, big Georgia Tech. University heavyweight will meet "Dutch" Hefner, giant 225 pound Sherman, Tex., star in the semi-final, while one other good professional bout will compete the program.

The show on Memorial Day will be the first of a series which will extend through the outdoor season here and the matches will be staged every Saturday night following the Decoration Day attraction.

A veteran of the track, Chet Miller (above), of Detroit, will face the starter in the 500-mile Memorial Day race at Indianapolis. Miller has led in the classic on several occasions only to be forced out by accidents.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

It is possible that Pickaway-co will lose another of its coaches this fall—it is Warren Hobbie, of New Holland, who has been offered a job at a Clinton-co school, Jefferson-twp, where Howard L. Rhude, former New Holland superintendent, is now in charge. Hobbie has also been hired at New Holland where his success has been excellent and he has not yet decided what he intends to do.

Other coaching changes will be found at Saltcreek-twp where Marvin Miller has been elevated to superintendent after serving several years as principal-coach, and at Perry-twp, Atlanta, where Harold "Bud" Costlow also becomes superintendent after serving a year as principal-coach.

Recreation ball league has done one more good thing this year—it has rejuvenated the interest of Frank Lynch, soft drink czar, in the national game. At the outset of the league naturally a president was needed and Mr. Lynch, who answers to the name of Francis Aloysius and a number of others, was elected. He said at that time he was too busy, but now he has again been bitten by the bug and is taking an active part in leading the league over its rough spots. The league couldn't have a better president than Frank Lynch, who is truly the father of recreation ball in Circleville.

SOX, INDIANS SHOW GAINS

Chicago Team Bumps New York With Earnshaw on Hill; Boston Drubbed.

NEW YORK, May 26.—For years and years, the National League had the close races while one or two clubs were fighting it out for the American league pennant with the rest nowhere.

But this year the pendulum has swung the other way and today we find the league-leading Yankees under the 600 mark and the tail-end White Sox at 400. In the National league today exactly 400 points separates the Pirates at 633 and the Reds at 233.

The Pirates already are 12 full games ahead of the Reds while the Yanks are only six in front of the White Sox, and a few days could see the Yanks buried in the second division and the Chicago entry up in the first division.

If the Yanks continue as they've been going lately they'll land in the basement with a thud. They dropped another to the White Sox yesterday, 7 to 5, when George Barnshaw outpitched George Uhle, Danny MacFayden and Van Atta.

The Yanks have now dropped three straight series in the west and have lost seven of their last nine games, and Owner Jack Ruppert's moans may be heard from the battery to the Bronx.

The fast stepping Indians bounced Rhodes, Pennock and Johnson around for 24 hits to convince the Red Sox that they really needed Wes Ferrell who the Indians traded to the Red Sox yesterday. With that kind of hitting back of him Pearson merely breezed along to win 18 to 3.

REPORT OF CITY LIBRARY

The library staff consists of Mary Wilder, librarian; Leola Warner first assistant from January to August; Gretchen Moeller, first assistant from September to December; Wilma Phebus, second assistant; Jessie Cummings, substitute; Ralph E. Roby, janitor.

Report of the Librarian to the Board of trustees of the Circleville Public Library—1933.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

As librarian, I have the honor to submit herewith the sixtieth annual report of the Circleville Public Library.

The last three years have recorded the most intensive use of public libraries ever known in this country. Our library has, during this period, enrolled increasing numbers of new borrowers, and the circulation of books has reached its greatest heights. During the past year, a few libraries have reported slight decreases in the number of books issued, but our library has not only maintained the high circulation rate of 1931 and 1932, but has shown a substantial increase. Cards have been issued to more new borrowers than have been recorded in any other year.

USE RESOURCES

The resources of the library have been drawn upon more fully, and books and other property have been subject to strenuous use. The result of the rigid economies, practiced during this period, are showing in the condition of all library property.

As few replacements have been made, books have continued in service long after they have reached a condition in which additional mending was economical or practical. No new furniture, or other equipment, has been added during the year, and no repairs have been made on the equipment already on hand.

The increase in work has been handled by the regular staff, though many functions of the library have been curtailed by lack of time for their furtherance.

No inventory was taken during the last year, and only a partial one in 1931. Though over 1,300 more books were repaired, in the library than during the preceding year, an accumulation of several hundred volumes remained on hand to start the repair work in a new year.

The card catalog, begun in 1900, has been kept up-to-date, with all additions to the library, but needs revision and the replacement of soiled and worn cards and guides. At the close of the year, considerable material for the information file remained to be sorted and classified.

The regular cleaning schedule, previously in force, was given up during the last year. In May, the library was given a thorough and much needed cleaning. Since that time, no method has been adopted for this care of library property. It is now urgent that a definite system, or plan, for this work should be arranged.

and carpentry work are greatly needed.

ADMINISTRATION

The Board of Trustees held twelve regular and four special sessions during the year. Matters for special consideration included the resolutions commemorating the services of Mr. H. P. Folsom as a member of this Board; a district meeting of the Ohio Library Association, held in Circleville, June 6, financial questions; and a change on the library staff.

The financial situation of the libraries of the state was subject of importance during the year, particularly during the times in which the legislature was in session. A law, which was adopted, made provisions for the support of public libraries, which involved an extension of library privileges. Action of the Board was taken on this point and a resolution passed, and presented to the City Council for approval, extending library service to county, as well as city, residents.

The resignation of Miss Leola Warner, first assistant librarian, was presented to the Board and acted upon at a special meeting, in August. Miss Warner was a member of the training class, organized in this library in the summer of 1924, and became a member of the staff in the following January. At the resignation of Miss Elizabeth Drum, in 1927, Miss Warner, after completing a short course of training at Western Reserve university library school, was appointed first assistant.

The Board, in filling this vacancy, was fortunate in securing Miss Gretchen Moeller, whose qualifications are especially adapted to the needs of this library.

HOME USE OF BOOKS

The total number of books, and other material, loaned for home and school use, numbered 53,082 items, including books, pamphlets, clippings, maps and pictures. Increases in numbers issued were shown in all classes of books except general literature (poetry, drama and essays), history, and rental books. A detailed report on books issued is included with this summary.

The number of books issued to juveniles, while more stationary than the number issued to adults, shows a gradual increase during the last four years. Ten years ago, the books issued were almost equally divided between adult and juvenile readers, since that time, there has been an increase of 143 per cent in the number of books issued annually on the cards of adult patrons.

The registration of many new borrowers accounts for much of the increase in adult reading, but many persons, formerly only occasional patrons, are now regular visitors to, and borrowers from the library.

The character of many of the book being most read, and the information which the library is called upon to supply, shows clearly the part to be taken in present day economic and social adjustments.

Books on social science and practical philosophy have been of special interest, and, among the new books added to the library, during the year, books of this type have been much in demand. Information on industrial subjects has been supplied to individual inquiries, as fully as our resources made possible.

BOOK SUPPLY

The number of volumes, now listed in our book stock, is 26,432. During the year 672 volumes were added and 278 withdrawn.

As a complete inventory has not been made for two years, further reduction in number may be anticipated, although there have, apparently, been fewer losses than in other years.

The deterioration in the condition of the books of our library has also been very great and the discarding of many volumes is imminent.

The largest number of books, ever repaired in the library, were mended by the staff, during 1933. The total number was 6,749, in addition to which, 192 volumes were rebound.

Of the books added, 13 were reference books, 64 bound magazines, 239 juveniles, and 350 in the general circulating collection, and 6 in the permanent loan of the D. A. R. The total number was the smallest in many years, the average for the last five years having been 822, and for the preceding five years, 976.

The sources of our additions for the year were:—432 from the regular book fund; four added to the Marcus A. Brown Library; 105 transferred from the Rental Collection; 50 received as gifts; 66 by binding and 15 from all other sources.

A generous gift of books from Miss Elizabeth J. Ruggles was the largest single gift received during the year.

The five-year plan of registering borrowers has now completed its first cycle, during which, 2,572 1842 old card holders re-registered, a total of 4,114, from which the 1,067 registrations of 1929 will be withdrawn during the coming year.

In order to estimate the proportional increase during the coming year, it is planned to keep a separate registration of county and city borrowers. At the close of 1933, there were, approximately 250 active cards held by non resident borrowers.

All residents of Circleville, who have not re-registered since 1929, will be, in future, credited as new borrowers, although they may have had cards at some time, previous to that date.

The fee of $1.00 per year, charged to non-residents, is being continued in the case of patrons from outside of Pickaway-co.

The library has also, each year, a number of transient patrons, who make a security deposit for books borrowed. In such cases no fee is charged.

BUILDING AND EQUIPMENT

Considering the few examples of library architecture available, when our building was planned, the rooms of the Public Library have served well, during the forty-two years of their occupancy.

Within fifteen years after moving into the Memorial hall and Public library building, the library had increased, in number of books and patrons, to the limit of the capacity provided.

After having been badly handicapped by lack of room, for a number of years, when the Marcus A. Brown bequest became available, in 1916, more space and equipment became imperative. By action of the City Council, the remainder of the first floor, included in the 99 years lease, held by the city, was made available. By means of a bond issue for this purpose, an architect was employed and the rooms reconstructed for the use of the library.

Besides the additional book room, the conversion of the old stack room provided a much needed reference room, additional space for the smaller children, and better arrangements for the circulation desk. Display cases and other equipment, provided at this time, greatly facilitated all of the work of the library.

Every part of this added accommodation is now fully used and the needs of the future should now be an important consideration. The normal growth of the library, new demands and new opportunities, demands to the intention to give service to all residents of the county, enlarges all types of use made of the library plant.

USED FOR MEETINGS

As a local center for many meetings, the library trustees' room is much used. Besides the regular meetings of the trustees and of the Monday club, the newly organized Pickaway-co Garden club has been meeting here during the year. Committees, civic and study groups have used the room on many occasions and have brought about contacts of special value to the library.

Needs of the present, to be worked out in plans for the future, demand increased shelf room for books and periodicals, and fire proof protection for many valuable possessions. The increase in books during the past ten years has been about 900 volumes per year, requiring, at least, an additional hundred feet of shelving, each year.

Many periodicals, permanently useful, require more room, than is now available, for proper handling and accessibility. The preserving and binding of local newspapers is a duty of the library, long neglected. Fire proof storage for irreplaceable property should be provided, the present lack of such insurance depriving the library of many valuable gifts, each year.

Provisions for the accommodation of readers are decreasing, over half of the chairs provided for the general reading room are no longer usable, and have been removed for repairs or replacement.

LIBRARY ACTIVITIES

With the largest circulation of books, corresponding increases in book mending, reference work, and other duties of the library staff, less time was available for outside activities, the preparation of publicity material, or other promotional projects.

The librarians, worked with the program and other committees, of several organizations, and gave an informal talk, on library activities, at a club meeting. Assistance was also given to the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, and others, working for the civic and social welfare of the community.

The meeting of the Ohio Library Association in Columbus, in April, was attended by your librarian, who had a part in the program at one of the sessions. Miss Warner and Miss Phebus each spent a day at the convention and Mr. Groce, Miss Moodie and Mrs. Jeffries attended the conference of the Library Trustees' association. At the election of officers of the Library Association, our library was recognized in the choice of vice presidents.

Circleville was selected for a district meeting of the Ohio Library association, which was held on June 6. Excellent speakers, on timely and important topics, furnished the program. Our president, Mr. Groce, extended the welcome to our visitors, and a number of organizations and citizens cooperating in making the occasion a success. A luncheon at "The Boggis" and a trip to Logan Elm were social features of the day. At the luncheon, Mr. Daley gave a short talk about the historical old hotel and the scenes to be visited on the drive.

In the early summer, Miss Warner and Miss Phebus spent a few days at the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago.

They Never Give Up

ONE of the things which make federal officers much more feared by the under world than state officers is the relentlessness with which they go after their men.

State authorities as a general rule are inclined to drop a case after a considerable time has elapsed without results being achieved. Other cases occur to demand attention, or a change in officials may be a factor.

The federal government, however, follows the policy of never giving up. Public interest and even the interest of higher officials may wane, but the men in the field have orders to "get their man." This they do with remarkable consistency.

The relentlessness of their search is illustrated at present in two or three cases of more or less recent occurrence. The union station massacre in Kansas City occurred last June 17. In December of 1931, the country was shocked by the bloody Leavenworth prison break. Reports that the department of justice had dropped these cases caused inquiry to be made the other day. Instead of dropping them, the department had sent out orders to "prove the fugitive dead or produce him." It was indicated that the search would be continued until this was done.

Eleven persons already are under indictment in the Kansas City massacre case. Three of these are dead, one is in a federal prison and six are free on bond. Only one is at large, but it is the determination of the government to bring him to justice before the case will be regarded as ended. The work of department of justice agents has been greatly increased since the government undertook to assist the states in the war on kidnapers and other gangsters. This promises to be further added to through the enactment of bills now pending in congress.

If people mimic the movies, why not show the stars laughing merrily as they pay their taxes.

Changing Wheat Policies

WHAT may prove encouraging news to America wheat growers comes from Europe.

According to reports from Rome, where a world wheat agreement recently was reached, the former big wheat-importing countries of Europe gradually are abandoning their policy of self-sufficiency and reverting toward their former practice of importing a large part of their grain. The information is contained in a report of the wheat advisory committee made to the government.

England, Germany, France and Italy were treated in the report. All of these countries formerly supplied the greater portion of their wheat needs through imports. Steps have been taken by each of them to bring about reductions in acreage, and progress in all is reported.

There had been indications that foreign nations would attempt to take advantage of America's wheat-reduction program by increasing their own grain crops. That this is not to occur but, instead, the opposite policy be adopted with the idea of ultimately returning to the importation of grain, is a development of major importance on this side of the Atlantic. It may mean that American wheat growers soon again will have profitable foreign markets for their product.

A white man outshot Indians in an archery contest in Kansas City. Their native coach explained that the redman were "out of practice." He might have emphasized the deteriorating effects of civilization.

1918 to 1933: "You can't make people good by law." 1934: "Now let's pass a law to stop crookedness."

The real savior of France, however, was General D'Paul.

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO

Stanley went each day to the little bookshop. She had found a real pleasure in her work. Customers were few and in the dimness and quiet of the old shop Stanley found much time to dip into the books which lined the walls quite to the low ceiling. At first she was a wanderer in their midst, but gradually certain books began to emerge and mean something to her. She learned in a surprisingly short time how to put her hand on nearly any volume in the place. She found a genuine pleasure in selling a book she had read and loved, to a person who would share her delight in it. And if she found this association with the old books pleasant, it was enlivened and enhanced by the presence of Felix Rose. He said little, but Stanley learned to listen gravely to what he did say, to remember it afterward. She began to think him a rather splendid old man, and she wanted John Harmon to know him. She thought he had something that John Harmon needed—a repose, an impartial judgment, a simple understanding. He had lived with books and men—and he had learned to discriminate among both, very wisely. He had learned what to discard and what to cherish. Stanley envied him this sense of value, which comes only with age—and not always then; she envied him his serenity which she so much desired and which seemed always to be eluding her.

She had come very near to happiness in these months since her marriage but now she moved in the shadow of John Harmon's depression. Try though he might, and he did try hard, he could not conceal from her the fact that the book was not coming on as it should, and because it wasn't things could not be as gay and beautifully right as they had been in those weeks before Christmas when life had been so strangely sweet and uncomplicated.

And all the time Stanley was thinking about something and trying not to at the same time. She thought of it while she was putting the kettle on to boil, while she was walking through winter sunlight or gloom to work, while she was lying sleepless in bed listening to the now frenzied, now stumbling elixir of John Harmon's typewriter. He said he could not write a "smart novel about smart people" and never see any, never know any—never move among them. Well, Stanley knew where to find smart people—the kind of people John Harmon wanted to know, the kind he had come to New York to know, the kind he had developed such an uncanny flair for writing about and had tried to put into a book and was slowly breaking his heart because he wasn't succeeding. She knew them. She had only to make the effort and she could easily get in touch with them. There were Perry Deverest—and Marcia—and Nigel Stern. She thought of Perry and the things he had said so well, of Marcia and her beautiful studio, of Dennis St. John and her clever drawings—all this she could give John Harmon. Perry would come at a young author interesting table garnishment. Nigel Stern would, perhaps, welcome them more casually, but no less delightfully.

But all this meant going back; then recited a number of qualifications necessary for the next governor of Ohio, and close by saying "To win the election this fall we must stand together behind the nominee of our party."

SPARKS: "I charge that Governor White ran from the banking and building and loan questions of our great state. I know of two delegations which refused to see, both of which were seeking banking and building loan legislation to protect Ohioans. Our party is faced with a splendid opportunity to lead this state from the rut into which Governor White's organization has thrown it."

Music for the evening was provided by Mr. Sensenbrenner, who, accompanied by Miss Anna Schleyer, sang three solos.

All in all members of the Republican club sponsoring the rally were very pleased with the attendance and the addresses made by the various candidates.

ELDEN: "I quote from an address by Governor White in November, 1930, a few days before election: 'I shall not be an absentee governor, neither shall I serve by proxy, and today while the serious situation exists in Toledo he is fishing, etc., in Michigan.'"

"The only result I can see of this system of alphabetic government we now have is C. O. D. on the taxpayers when it is all over. Harmony in our ranks is necessary for election this fall."

HAIGLER: "All the tax plans of the present state government have begun at the wrong end. The government of our state continues to spend just as it did in prosperous years."

There are just two chief issues at this election: 1. Reduce expenditures to the amount we can afford to pay; 2. Provide for a fairer distribution of expense."

HARRISON: "Already some of our candidates have started to throw rocks. They say I am not acquainted but that is what I am here for tonight. Some of us as a matter of fact are too well known."

There has not been an Ohio governor from my county of Stark since William McKinley."

going back where things had hurt her so. It meant, perhaps, Drew—seeing him again. She was not sure she wanted to see Drew again—ever. Was not sure just what would happen to her if she did. She had found happiness and peace and security with John Harmon and she clung to them fiercely, hating to risk them; dreading to face what she was not sure of, what she did not venture even to think about.

But she loved John Harmon and his peace of mind was precious to her. Finally it became more precious to her than her own—which she could not have anyway—so she sat down and wrote to Perry Deverest. She told him quite simply what love for John Harmon and the life together and the book John Harmon was writing. She asked him to come to tea—she set a date. Perry's reply was immediate and exactly like him.

"I shall surely be with you on Tuesday. I am very anxious to meet the man who did all the things for you I couldn't do, though I wanted to so much. He must clearly understand that I've always been in love with you and still am, but that I respect his right to you, and that as long as he can make you happy I shall never interfere."

"Yours devotedly, Perry."

Stanley showed John Harmon the letter and said, "I wrote and asked him to come to tea—he's a very old and good friend of mine. I hope you will like each other."

John Harmon read the letter and grinned appreciatively. "It's practically a challenge but I accept it! Have him to tea by all means—it will be great to know somebody like him. That's what I need, Stanley—mental stimulus, contact with new and keen personalities. I'm starved for it, I always have been. That's why you were a godsend to me, last summer—you still are, precious," he stopped to put his arms about her, hold her close, his lips against her hair, "but you're me now—you're no longer outside, you're inside, close to my heart. Do you know what I mean, Stanley?"

"Yes, I know," And she smiled at him through a blur of sudden tears and pressed her face against his shoulder.

"Perry," Stanley gave him both her hands.

"Hello, darlin', it's great seeing you again."

"And you, Perry. I've wanted to—many times."

"Then why—"

"Never mind that now." She took his hat and stick and smiled at him with eyes that somehow continued to both laugh and weep, so mixed was the emotion in them. "It's been nearly a year."

"Don't I know it? Let me look at you, darlin'."

She stood quite still in front of him, straight and slim in a dull blue dress. Her hair lay in the same smooth waves revealing the beautiful curve of her head; her eyes met his with the same clear, friendly understanding. He stared at her with lazily smiling, half-closed blue eyes and found her not so very different—more lovely perhaps, with a more complete charm, a more fulfilled beauty.

"That'll do," he said, turning away abruptly. "Even a cat may look at a king—but not too long. Charmin' room you have here, perfectly delightful."

Outside, a cold rain, half sleet, half snow, beat against the window-panes and froze there. Inside, a fire burned on the hearth, the blue candles were lighted against the thickening twilight and the room lay serene and beautiful in their mellow glow. Stanley had bought primroses and set them in black pots on the deep windowsills. She had placed the tea-table close to the fire and laid out the pink tea cups and the pewter teapot. She had drawn the wing chair up beside the tea-table and balanced it with her own little slat-back rocker, which had come down to them for Christmas from the attic in Vermont.

"I love it. I've been very happy here, Perry."

"Yes, one can believe that."

"They sat down in front of the fire. It was very quiet in the room—the shadows closed about them gently, the fire leaped and danced on the hearth."

"And the husband, Stanley, are you going to produce him?"

"Of course. But I wanted a little time with you first. He'll be in shortly—you'll like him, Perry—he's sort of wonderful."

"He must be—to make you look like that." And then Perry remembered another man who had made her look, if not exactly like that then near enough.

"And what of Drew, Stanley? Is that over?"

"I don't know, Perry."

She met his eyes directly. "I've tried to think it was—not when I married John Harmon, but since, during these last few months. But I can't be sure; perhaps I'll never be sure."

"Is that why you haven't let me see you?"

"Yes, I didn't want to be reminded of things—things I was trying to forget."

"And now?"

"It's John Harmon, you see. I'm going to be quite honest with you, Perry—I've never been anything else. I've been very happy here alone, I haven't needed anything more—but John Harmon has."

"And I have been called in to supply them, I suppose," drawled Perry lighting a cigarette carefully.

"Will you mind so very much, my dear? Just dropping in, now and then, having tea with us?"

Perry set down his teacup, reached for her hand, held it lightly but firmly between his. "Forgive me, Stanley, that was very young of me. You know I'll do anything I can—now that you've let me find you again. But, first, you must promise to come back—where you belong. It's silly of you, Stanley, and a little stupid to continue to run away from things. You can't do it forever, you know. Hide in a lovely old room like this, tucked away from everybody. Some day you'll have to come back. And I can't believe you'll find it so hard. You look very happy, Stanley, and very sure of yourself."

"I am, Perry, to a certain extent. Beyond that—" She shrugged, smiled at him a little wistfully. "I wonder does one ever know just how sure they are of things?"

COLUMBUS, May 26.—Charges that officers of the state liquor control department have been using the means of "entrapment" to arrest liquor law violators were vehemently denied here today by Edmund G. Matthews, chief of the enforcement division of the liquor department.

MOVIES

AT THE CLIFTONA

An underwater battle between a man and a crocodile at a depth of more than thirty feet will be shown on the screen for the first time in "Tarzan and His Mate," shown Sunday, Monday and Tuesday at the Cliftona Theatre. Johnny Weissmuller is one of the combatants.

In the new picture, directed by Cedric Gibbons, the swimming champion was required to plunge into a river with a man-eating "croc" for a scene in which he saves the life of Maureen O'Sullivan.

To photograph the strange battle a special camera device was constructed to penetrate water depths. The resulting action will provide many gasps in addition to the thrills of elephant charges, battles with lions, rhinoceros charges, giant apes, and other jungle denizens to be included in the picture.

Appearing in the cast with Weissmuller and Miss O'Sullivan are Neil Hamilton, Paul Cavanagh, Forrester Harvey, Doris Lloyd, William Stack, Desmond Roberts and Nathan Curry. The story is based on the famous fictional character created by Edgar Rice Burroughs.

AT THE GRAND

When Joan Blondell was unable to get to her studio to take a scene for a picture because she was just recuperating from an appendicitis operation, the studio went to her.

While working in the Warner Bros. production, "I've Got Your Number," which comes to the Grand Theatre on Sunday, she was stricken with acute appendicitis, but went gamely on with her work until the picture was finished and then went to the hospital for an operation. Three weeks after the operation it was found necessary to remake one of the scenes.

Thrive in the Arctic

The only domestic animal bred profitably in the Arctic regions is the reindeer, because it requires neither hay for feed nor shelter for protection. There are more than 125,000,000 of them, and it is not uncommon for single breeders in Arctic Siberia to own herds of 10,000 at a time.

TOO RICH TO DIE

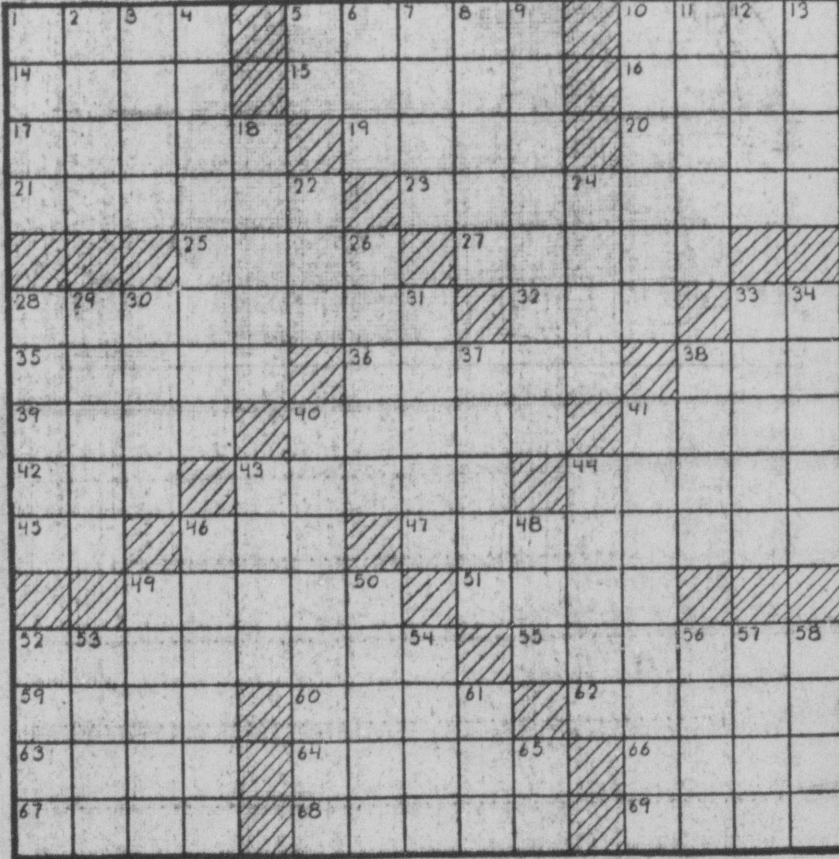

I'd hate to die a millionaire
With so much want found everywhere;
I'd be ashamed to stop and die
As all the world would wonder why
I left so much behind.
While there were some who suffered much
Because they lacked the Midas touch
Or could not Midas find;
I'd hate to have so much of gold
When death took on me gripping hold
That still on it I'd have my heart
As journey last I'd fearful start;
Indeed I'd be ashamed to face
My Maker with so great disgrace.

To have so much of cumbered wealth
When there were those bereft of health—
Yes, little children cursed from birth,
And doomed to have no joy or mirth.
Thou not a fault of theirs;
When widows clintched by hunger's grip
Were pinched of face and pale of lip,
Too weak to offer prayers.
Load up the hearse with all your gold;
Load it as full as it will hold.
You'll never keep it with your bones,
For as the hearse rolls off for the stones
On that last ride for good or worse,
The tall-board drops from every hearse.

Senate immediately upon completion, and the State Department's secrecy has aroused suspicion . . . Justice Stone, one of the most thoughtful members of the Supreme Court, personally designed the house in which he lives. It is replete with fireplaces, and its garden is one of the coolest in Washington . . . The only thing the Justice overlooked was a mint bed.

CCC College

The CCC is doing some excellent work in educating the youngsters in its camps. Many of them "hit the road" before they had even a semblance of an education. All are eager to learn. Most of them also are tremendously interested in current social problems—especially the question of whether society owes it to a man to provide him with a job . . . Some of the best CCC educational work is done by Nat Frame, formerly of the University of West Virginia. The Wagner-Costigan anti-lynch bill has been amended to apply only to cases where the victim is taken from "the custody of any peace officer" . . . This would hit only about half the lynchings. From 1918 to 1934 there were 559 lynchings. Only 251 victims were taken from peace officers.

Peace Pilgrimage

Miss Elizabeth Wheeler, crusading daughter of Montana's militant Senator Burton K. Wheeler, led a big student peace demonstration in the Capital . . . Music was furnished by the U. S. Navy band, in full dress uniform . . . New Mexico's enlightened Senator Bronson Cutting, unlike most of his colleagues, is a poor hand when it comes to getting publicity for himself. The other day he made a sensational speech advocating the nationalization of banking, but because he prepared only one copy of the address it went practically unnoticed . . . And Cutting is a newspaperman himself . . . Miss Frances (Robby) Robinson, administrative assistant to Hugh Johnson, is so overwhelmed with work that when she goes to the hair-dresser she takes along a stenographer and dictates her replies to mail.

Spanish Student

Lovely Senora Espil, the Chicago girl who married the Argentine Ambassador, is taking her Spanish seriously. Though she never knew a word of it a few months ago, she was seen in Rock Creek Park the other day sitting in her car reading the life of San Martin . . . There were too many telephone calls at home, she said, so she escaped to the park. . . . John Dickinson, erudite Assistant Secretary of Commerce, is having a hard time filling the post left vacant by Willard Thorp when Roosevelt withdrew his name as Chief of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce . . . Dickinson offered the job to Stacy May, director of the Rockefeller Foundation, an ideal selection. May wired back: "No self-respecting man would take the job after the way Roosevelt let Thorp down."

Collection Drive

The Administration is passing up no bet in its far-flung drive to collect all taxes and other sums due Uncle Sam . . . Its latest move is to put the Department of Justice on the trail of millions of dollars of unpaid fines and assessments of old prohibition produced men. . . . Some $7,000,000 is involved, and the Justice Department believes the government has a good chance of collecting a large portion of it.

The Value of Mathematics

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the fourth in a series of articles by the Faculty of Circleville High School to aid students in their selection of courses for next school term. Students will be asked to register Monday, May 28.

The last in this series of articles, written by Fred Waits on Sciences, will appear in the last issue of the Red and Black next Saturday.

By Miss Margaret Mattinson.

CAN the value of an education, whether liberal or professional, be expressed in dollars and cents? It seems that we are apt to attempt this impossibility. True enough, we do not wish to pursue those branches of study which would actually retard us in our forward march—but are there any such in our high school curricula?

Let us consider for a moment the occupations or professions in which the study of mathematics is essential. Most of the professions require elementary algebra, and many of them geometry and intermediate algebra. Among these are the various engineering professions, medicine, scientific research, pharmacy, aeronautics, architecture, interior decorating, designing, navigation—in fact the list is a long one.

We are all anxious that our young people pursue those studies which will be of use to them in earning a livelihood; which will tend to give them a broader outlook on life; which will enable them to be more interesting and companionable associates; which will lift them to higher ideals; which will lead them to a fuller, more abundant life; in all, those which will result in their being nobler and more worthy citizens.

In these days of keen competition, in a highly commercialized and specialized civilization, most of us are too prone to stress the first of these requisites and to lose sight of the others.

It is perfectly true that Mary may never solve an algebraic equation, construct a geometric figure, or translate a Latin sentence a single time after she emerges from the second year of high school. It is equally probable that John may never be required to make a piece of furniture, after spending several years learning to do this in school, or tell the construction of a certain part of speech. But are these sufficient reasons why we should advise all the Marys and Johns to elect different courses than these?

Haven't these two gained something, tangible or intangible, from these studies, the contacts they have made, and the good habits they have formed while pursuing them—or some lesson of life which they may use in later years?

The sciences, biological or non-biological, are almost unmitigatedly good. Nothing of mathematics, its language, its workings, its symbolism.

The very world about us is full of symmetry and proportion—the fundamental laws of which are to be found in our study of mathematics.

Each course in high school has its excellent points and its adherents.

However, there seems to be a general opinion among those engaged in different occupations, that as a sound basis for any profession or work, the classical studies afford the best.

"Dirty Jack"

There was one little Jack, not very long back, And it's said to his lasting disgrace, That he never was seen with his hands at all clean, Nor yet ever clean was his face.

His friends were much hurt to see so much dirt, And often and well did they scold, But all was in vain, he was dirty again, Before they had done it an hour.

When to wash he was sent, he reluctantly went, With water to splash himself over, But he left the black streaks all over his cheeks, And made them look worse than before.

The pigs in the dirt couldn't be more expert, Than Jack was at grubbing about, And people have thought, this young gentleman ought, To've been made with four legs and a snout.

The idle and bad may unto this lad, Be dirty and black, to be sure; But good boys are seen to be decent and clean, Although they be ever so poor.

—Pauline Crosby,

Seventh Grade, Corwin St.

CIRCLEVILLE HIGH SCHOOL RECOGNIZED AS FIRST CLASS

ANNUAL BANQUET PLANS COMPLETE

Seniors, Supt. Daley, Faculty, Board of Education To Be Guests of Juniors.

The invitation committee with Margie Merz, chairman, early this week issued the formal invitations to the Junior-Senior banquet. As an innovation each faculty member this year has been invited to bring a guest.

The decoration and seating committees have been diligently working this week. The decorators have both the Coffee shoppe and the Parish house to decorate this year.

This committee is headed by Otis Mader and includes Kathryn Chaffin, Elizabeth Dowden, James Lyle, Doris Moffitt, and George Speakman.

The banquet will be at the New American Coffee Shoppe at 6:30. Dancing will begin at 9:00 o'clock at the St. Philip's Parish house.

Guests besides the seniors will include the members of the Board of Education and their wives, Supt. E. L. Daley, and the faculty. As before, freshman girls have been chosen to serve. This year those selected are Charlotte Cook, Faye Elliott, Mary Crites, Ruby Chaffin, June West, Rosemary Metzger, and Jessie Dresbach.

These girls were chosen by the banquet committee from the Home Economics class.

STUDENTS PRESENT "TREASURE ISLAND"

The pupils of C. H. S. were taken to "Treasure Island" Tuesday when that well-known romance was presented in chapel by a group of Freshman girls.

The star of the performance was Nana Cooper as "Long John Silver." She not only spoke her long lines well, but she lived the character.

Others in the cast were Mary Crites, Beatrice Dowden, Esther Garrett, Audrey Martin, Mary Catherine Trump, and Marjorie Westenhaver.

The cast are members of Miss Rain's English class.

The announcer was Lucille Heise.

Sport Items

This is the banner year for the Sophs in athletics!

The second year men have swept everything before them, taking the banners in volleyball, baseball, and track.

A new type of championship banner is to be given this year to the winners in intramural sports.

Instead of individual sport awards as in previous years one banner only will be presented with the name of each sport and the winner.

This is the year that volleyball and track awards have been made, as in previous years boys' and girls' basketball were recognized for banner awards.

Golf letters are now a possibility for Circleville high golfers. If the Tigers annex the Central league championship today at the Walnut Cliffs country club golf letters will be a reality.

Chances, according to Coach Herberholz, are excellent for coping the championship. John Jenkins, Joe Jenkins, Bob Freize, and Tink Hill are representing C. H. S. today.

GLEE CLUB PLANS PICNIC THURSDAY

As the first social affair of any sort of the Special glee club, the members and their guests will have a picnic at Dewey park Thursday, May 31.

The Special glee club is comprised of the members of the Boys' and Girls' glee clubs.

Betty Barnes, Stanley Melvin, Margie Merz, Eleanor Miller, and George Roth make up the "cats" committee.

The attendance committee includes Lydia Given, Bernice Liston, and Ethel Stonerock.

Those in charge of the transportation are Margie Brown, Mark Maxey, and Catherine Stivers.

Four of the members of the faculty will accompany the group.

Member of North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools For 31 Years.

For the 31st consecutive year Circleville high school has been recognized as a member of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary schools.

The following is a quotation received from Joseph W. Fichter, chairman of the State committee: "At the annual meeting of the North Central Association, held in Chicago April 18-21, of Ohio's 311 North Central schools 239 were Unqualifiedly Recommended, 57 were Warned, and 15 were Advised. I am happy to inform you that the Circleville High School is among those Unqualifiedly Recommended."

This certifies that Circleville high school is a first grade high school.

SCHOOL ACTIVITIES TO BE RECOGNIZED

Assembly Program Monday To Honor Athletes, Band Members.

The annual Recognition Assembly of the high school has been set for Monday, May 28.

Featuring this assembly will be the awarding of basketball and track letters.

Recognition will also be given to various intramural champions. These include the sophomores in track, baseball and volleyball; the Senior class in boys' basketball; and the Sophomore girls in basketball.

Band members who received letters will also be honored. Although the band letters have been awarded this was not done publicly.

To complete the Recognition program several scholarships will be awarded.

This is one of the year's outstanding assemblies. Monday's program is scheduled for the eighth period.

Installs Officers

At the Hi-Y meeting which was held Tuesday, May 22, five new officers were installed.

The newly elected officials include Tom Kirwin, president; Otis Mader, vice-president; George Speakman, secretary; Jim Henderson, treasurer; and Fred Grant, sergeant-at-arms.

As delegates to the Hi-Y convention to be held at Camp Campbell Gard, near Hamilton, Ohio, the club elected Dick Plum, James Henderson, and Loren Carothers. The club will pay the camp registration fee.

BANDS TO PLAY MEMORIAL DAY

The Junior and Senior bands have been engaged to play for the Circleville Memorial Day exercises, May 30.

Both organizations played last year.

Mr. Zaenglein was present at rehearsal Tuesday. The popular director was released from the hospital a couple of weeks ago, and has been steadily improving.

Mr. Gill had charge of the band at the rehearsal at the Parish house.

STUDENT "WORKS" OVERTIME AT C.H.S.

ONE of the brethren in our midst has become a popular lounge in Principal Gephart's "colossal palace."

It seems as though Jim Lyle has been working quite a bit overtime with his "40 and 8" ninth periods.

This is not exactly according to the NRA code, but Jim is certainly "doing his part" under Mr. Gephart's code of "better ethics."

Sir Jim has found that Principal Gephart and not Gen. Hugh S. Johnson of the NRA is running the ninth period part of his extracurricular activities.

At the rate that Jim is "serving his time," 1944 may dawn before he gets out of the "big house."

In fact by the time the honorable Mr. Lyle has finished his extra course of activities in his high school career there may be among the residents of Circleville a lot of "little Lyles" who proudly call the hero of this tale "Grandpa."

THEATRE INSTALLS AIR CONDITIONER

After three weeks of steady work by a crew of eight men Harry Clifton, owner and manager of the Cliftona Theater, today is heralding the completion of an air washer and purifier which has been installed in his moving picture house in Pickaway-st.

Installation of the purifier was under the supervision of Otto Gluth, who has installed 52 similar plants for the Paramount-Publix Corp. in several south western states.

STARTS TODAY

Operation of the new plant started with this afternoon's show and will be in continuous operation throughout the summer. It purifies and washes the air, and the air is changed in the theater every minute. This is done through a series of operations which includes bringing water from a well, dug at the rear of the theater, the compression of the water to a certain pressure, then being fed through spray nozzles against baffles. These baffles are so arranged that the heat of the outside air is carried off and the cool, purified, washed air is distributed through the theater by newly installed blowers. After entering the theater the air is controlled by a series of arrangements which distributes the washed and purified air evenly throughout the house.

The management insists that this new unit not be confused with a refrigeration system, as, in the nature of an air purifier, this system is recommended by doctors throughout the country as the

Did You Know

By Pat J. Kirwin

THAT the first high-wheeled bicycle owned in Chillicothe made the trip from Circleville to Chillicothe in less than three hours, a fact published in every weekly paper in this section of Ohio. The rider and owner of the bicycle was George Crouse Tyler, of Chillicothe, and the theatrical world, who has just published his autobiography and theatrical reminiscences, under the title "What Goes Up—The Hazardous Fortunes of a Born Gambler."

This book is stuffed with great names and great events from James G. Blaine down to Mussolini, but to the residents of south-central Ohio, whose memories go back through the gay nineties, it is a panorama of their own time, seen through the eyes of a neighbor boy. To those interested in the theatre, and the great names connected with it, the book becomes alive and is the gallant record of a man to whom the theatre was a glorious way of living life to the full.

A condensed version of this book appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, the complete volume being much richer in interest and anecdote. The Circleville Public Library has just received a copy of the book and those interested in reading it will do well to call the library promptly, to insure the opportunity of borrowing it.

That 60 years ago this fall, fire, which originated from a cigar, destroyed the broom corn sheds and warehouse of Edward Smith. The buildings were located in the southwestern part of the city and the total loss amounted to more than $20,000. Three sheds, a warehouse, and a dwelling inhabited by Noah Barnes, colored, were swept by the blaze.

That religion came first and the baseball game on down line in Sabbath day importance in 1874. An article in The Herald of the time relates: "The usual game of baseball did not take place Sunday afternoon west of the gas works, because several of the players were detained later than usual at Sunday school for not being able to recite their catechetical lesson."

That 41 years ago, Renick Dunlap, son of Nelson J. Dunlap of Kingston, and former assistant secretary of agriculture during President Hoover's administration, was a student at Ohio State University. He had just received a promotion in the University's R. O. T. C.

That in December, 1893, Scott Hoggis sold his 280-acre farm in Pickaway-town to Samuel H. Ruggles for $21,000.

That the "dungeon prison" in the basement of the city building was condemned by a board of county visitors 41 years ago. A report submitted by the board in that year stated: "The city prison is a dark, damp underground room, not fit for a storage room, much less a prison. It is so vile that a majority of the board members refused to step inside." Members of the board were Francis Reichelderfer, Hattie A. Bostwick, Sarah A. Heffner, George H. Fickard, Seymour R. Van Meter and Missouri Millar.

That "The Circleville Window Glass Workers' Fishing Club" was the name of an organization composed of the younger employees of Circleville's glass works, which was formed in 1893. A social group, the organization enjoyed a number of dances and masquerade parties.

Two persons were stabbed with bayonets in hand-to-hand struggle with rioting mobs.

They fed them their own medicine and hurled bricks thrown by strikers back at them. Rioters

TOLEDO, Ohio, May 26.—Haywood Brown, New York columnist nearly took a patrol wagon ride early today.

He was in the crowd of strikers at the Auto-Lite plant when the guardsmen made a sortie into the mob and surrounded a few of them.

Brown was among those marshalled to a patrol wagon but was spared the indignity of a ride when he was able to identify himself. He had stopped off here on a tour.

not to be outdone caught tear gas bombs thrown by guardsmen and hurled them into ranks of soldiers.

Every time rioters scored a hit there was frenzied cheering from the mob of four thousand that has besieged the lines of the militiamen. Shrieking sirens of patrol wagons, ambulances and fire trucks answering false alarms gave a weird touch to the confusion in which two score were reported

PAGE DILLINGER!

GROVE CITY, May 26.—This is to remind Mr. John Dillinger that no matter how clever a person he is, there is always someone, somewhere who is just a little bit cleverer.

Ralph Shaw, 23, of Hamilton, O., today had gone Dillinger one better by escaping from Grove City's jail without a wooden gun. He was left unguarded, so he heated a metal rod on the jail stove and burned his way out through the wooden wall of the prison.

"No Need to Keep an Apartment or House Vacant"

Says Mark Parrett, Jr.

He inserted a classified ad recently and called the next morning to tell us he had rented the house a few hours after the paper had gone to press and added "I had several calls that evening and they were all good prospects, too."

With economic conditions showing improvement as they are, vacant houses are filling rapidly. If yours is still vacant don't you think it would be wise to follow Mr. Parrett's example and insert a classified ad? Get it before prospective renters who watch these columns daily.

Frankly alarmed over the existing financial conditions of schools

SCHOOL OUT TUESDAY

Superintendent E. L. Daley said Saturday that schools will be closed Tuesday with pupils to return Friday at 3 p. m. to receive their report cards.

Throughout the state, Dr. B. O. Skinner, state director of education, revealed today that he has dispatched a "letter of information" to all Ohio School superintendents.

The letter, which outlines the financial status of school districts, is accompanied by a request that the information be distributed directly to the public and that the public be called upon to bring pressure to bear upon members of the state legislature to provide prompt school relief.

Dr. Skinner urged that the material be laid before the state senators and representatives so that they may understand that the operation of schools during 1934-35 is dependent upon their action. He offered to provide speakers for meetings to be arranged in local communities.

The letter from Dr. Skinner was distributed in the state at the same time that Joseph A. Fichter, assistant state director of education, sounded the warning in an address at Mt. Vernon that "public education has broken down in some sections of the state," and that "many schools face the prospect of keeping their doors open for only part of the next school term."

SIX CANDIDATES FOR GOVERNOR TALK HERE

Brown, Elden, Haigler, Harrison, Morgan, and Sparks at G. O. P. Rally

OTHERS THERE, TOO

"Party Harmony" Stressed by All Speakers

Urged to follow the battle-cry, "Party Loyalty," through the election this fall 200 persons, nearly all of whom were Republicans, participated in a county-wide rally Friday at the Pickaway Country club. The meeting was sponsored by the Pickaway-co Republican club of which Sterling Lamb is president.

Marion Sensenbrenner, candidate for representative to the general assembly, was toastmaster.

Not only did the county Republicans hear the pleas for loyalty to party causes but today they are studying the relative qualities as far as they can determine them of all six of the party's avowed candidates for the nomination for governor.

ALL SIX PRESENT

The candidates include in the order called upon by the toastmaster: Clarence J. Brown, of Blaineville; John C. Elden, of Cleveland; Charles E. Haigler, of Washington C. H.; Frank Harrison of Massillon; Daniel F. Morgan, of Cleveland, and C. Nelson Sparks, of Akron.

All were permitted eight minute talks.

Other state candidates introduced were George C. Braden and Ralph Emmons, for secretary of state; Miss Lottie Randolph, of New Lexington, running for state central committeewoman from the 11th Ohio district; Tom White, of Fairfield-co, candidate for congress from the 11th Ohio district; Mrs. Helen Black Anderson, Salt-creek-twp, present committeewoman from the district; Missed Edna Burns and Hilda Reed, candidates for the nomination for county treasurer; Ray W. Hedges, were also present in a group.

The speaking part of the program followed a dinner served in "The Old Barn" by Ralph Barger, country club steward.

Every speaker on the evening's program stressed the need of loyalty after the August primary. Excerpts from the 8-minute talks of each of the gubernatorial candidates follow:

ALL SIX QUOTED

BROWN: "The chief issue of this campaign is 'Can the government be returned to the people?' It is certain the government of the great state of Ohio has not been in the hands of or in the interest of the people of the state. But the government has been used in the building of a vast political machine. The state highway department has millions on its hands now and it is keeping this money, but just wait until this fall prior to

Canada's Grasshoppers Prove too Tough for Farmer's Turkey Flock

EDMONTON, Alta., May 26.—Grasshoppers around here are plenty tough, if you believe the latest story making the rounds of the better informed circles. It seems that an Edmonton farmer determined to make use of thousands of grasshoppers infesting his fields, so he bought a flock of young turkeys and turned them loose. Two hours later the birds returned to their coop, plucked of their feathers and ready for the market.

BANDIT DIES ON AUGUST 2

Bowman Formally Sentenced Saturday; Stay of Execution Seems Certain.

HARRODSBURG, Ky., May 26.—Formal sentence to die August 2 in the electric chair at Eddyville state penitentiary was pronounced today upon Neal Bowman, convicted slayer of a bandit pal, in Mercer circuit court here.

The doomed gang chieftain was assured a longer respite, however, when Judge K. S. Alcorn allowed until October 2 for filing of an appeal, which will automatically stay the execution. Motion for a new trial was denied.

Bowman, convicted of shooting to death Comer Franklin and throwing his body into Herrington lake, heard the sentence without show of emotion. Judge Alcorn voiced regret that a man of your intelligence should have turned to this line of life.

It was the first death penalty decided in court here since the civil war.

In pleading for a new trial attorneys for Bowman charged prejudice was created by the open display of firearms by the prisoner's guards in the courtroom.

Shackled and machine gun guarded, Bowman was brought here by automobile early today from the State reformatory at Mansfield, and immediately being sentenced was returned here to await the outcome of his appeal.

Church Forum

What Part Ought the Church Take in the Healing of the Body? Christ did much healing and commanded his disciples to heal the sick. The healing ministry was practised by the early church and then relinquished partly because of the fake faith healers who exploited people to their own ends. There is need for the church to understand better the cause of today's ills and sickness and where there are causes other than physical that produce mental and physical disorders, to seek the reasons. Much has been written helpful to the church on faith healing by such men as Dr. Elwood Worcester, Dr. Samuel McComb and Dr. Sadler. The church ought to specialize in those healing concepts of the Christian faith and those basic doctrines of God in his universe which will induce happy adjustments of inevitable situations, putting about all perplexities an atmosphere of personal trust and intuitive understanding. Many are suffering from unfulfilled aspirations, thwarted desires, inadequate notions of life and God and nursing maladies too deep-seated to be touched by drug or scalpel. To illustrate a wrong concept of God may produce suffering and real agony; when death takes a member of the family, to think of God as having caused the death is wrong, for God is love. To disbelieve in prayer when it is not answered is to have a false conception of holy communion; prayer can mean nothing until God becomes real and loving. The church ought to be mending to give the correct conception of God, of sin and suffering and man's fiber personality which is of prime importance.

Lesson for May 27

THE LAST JUDGMENT

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 25:31-46. GOLDEN TEXT—For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad. II Cor. 5:10. PRIMARY TOPIC—Doing Things for Jesus. JUNIOR TOPIC—The King's Test of Service. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Serving Christ by Serving Others. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christ Our Judge.

A more correct topic for today's lesson would be The Judgment of the Nations. According to the legitimate textual and contextual significance it is the judgment of the living nations, which still lies in the future. The idea of a general judgment is a fundamental error. Doctor Pentecost well says, "It is a mischievous habit that has led the Christian world to speak of the judgment as being one great event taking place at the end of the world when all human beings, saints and sinners, Jew and Gentile, the living and the dead, shall stand up before the great white throne and there be judged. Nothing can be more wide of the Scriptures." The Bible speaks of several judgments, differing in respect to the subjects to be judged, the place of judgment, the time and result of the judgment. The judgment which we are considering today is not that one set forth in Revelation 20:11-14. It precedes that one by at least 1,000 years. A definite analysis of this lesson will show how entirely distinct this judgment is from the final judgment.

I. The Judge (v. 31).

He is the Son of man, the one who came and died to redeem the human race. At this time he is seen clothed with majesty and power sitting upon his throne acting as judge. There is no judgment, so far as sin is concerned, for those who now accept Jesus Christ as their Saviour (John 5:24).

II. The Time of Judgment (v. 31).

This judgment will take place when the Lord comes in his glory accompanied by a retinue of glorious angels, and after he has gathered the elect remnant of Israel. There will be no resurrection in connection with this judgment.

III. The Place of Judgment (v. 31).

The prophecies of Joel (2:1-17) and Zechariah (14:1-5) show that it will be in or near Jerusalem. The angel said to Mary, "Thou shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great and shall be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David. And he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end" (Luke 1:31-33). As David was a literal king and reigned at a literal place, there shall be at that time a literal judgment occupying a literal place of judgment.

IV. The People Judged (vv. 32-45).

It is expressly declared "before him shall be gathered all nations." They will be the nations left upon the earth after the church has been translated (I Thess. 4:16, 17). These are the nations to whom the gospel of the kingdom shall be preached just prior to the coming of the end of this age. "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come" (Matt. 24:14). This gospel is distinct from the grace of God which is now being preached. The preachers of this gospel will be the Jews (Rev. 7 and Rom. 11). They will move among the nations of the earth with the startling news of the Lord's approaching kingdom.

V. The Issue of the Judgment (vv. 32-46).

Some of the nations will gladly receive the message of the kingdom and most kindly receive the King's messengers. Others will persecute them, thrusting them into prison. Here those who receive the message will visit the messengers of the King and provide for their wants. At this time the Judge will separate the nations, placing the sheep on the right hand and the goats on the left. The sheep are those who give proper treatment to Christ's brethren, the messengers of the gospel of the kingdom. The goats are those who reject the message and maltreat the messengers. If these three classes, the sheep, the goats, and the brethren be kept separate in our thinking all confusion will be avoided. The sheep will enter upon the inheritance of a prepared kingdom. The goats will go into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels (v. 46).

The Chinese Presbyterian church of San Francisco, California, has celebrated its eightieth birthday anniversary.

The Catholic church is launching a drive to rid the country of salacious motion pictures; organized crusades existing twenty million people have already begun their work; pledges are being signed not to attend motion pictures which offend decency and Christian morality.

Delegates from many nations are now being chosen to attend the world Baptist Congress in Berlin August 4-10. Berlin authorities are willing to co-operate in the Congress arrangements.

Episcopalians have just celebrated in Philadelphia the 150th anniversary of the series of meetings in that city which led to the organization of the diocese of Pennsylvania and the establishment of the Protestant Episcopal church in the United States.

Another Christ of the Andes is being erected on the mountain border between Chile and Peru. It will commemorate the end of a 50 year old dissension between the two countries which began with the War of the Pacific in 1879 and ended with an arbitration in 1929 in which the United States had an important part. The other statue of the Christ in the Andes was erected in 1904 to mark the settlement of a boundary dispute between Chile and Argentina which lasted 55 years.

As a result of some 40 professional men meeting Jan. 1, for prayer together a new religious movement has developed. They organized themselves into a League of Prayer seeking to promote prayer, Bible study and personal recruiting for Christ's cause. When the League was heard about, people from over the nation applied for covenant cards. The news of the movement was sent to every English daily printed in the world and the response has been overwhelming. An office has been opened in the National Press Building, Washington, D. C., and the Christian Crusade was duly launched.

Roger Babson has said, "We say that it takes all our time to make a living; but the fact is that if one gave more time to worship and prayer, we would have more energy, courage and vision for making a living. One reason for the business depression was the poor church attendance."

Here then is a suggestion for a way out—It is for you and I to magnify the church by precept and example. Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?

McClarren and C. C. of A. Game Week's Highlight

The feature of next week's recreation ball contests comes on the last day of the week's schedule when the Container Corporation ball club takes on the McClarren Meats, a rampaging, slugging, but error-making ball club, on Thursday evening.

The McClarren's have lost one tilt, that to the Mecca by one run after a real battle. The McClarren's still claim they should have won that because Merle Davis scored the tying run while his brother stood in the pitcher's box with the ball. Davis was sent back to the third, however.

The Straw-board outfit is certain to use Bud Oliver on the hill and it is just as certain that if there is one team in the league that can get Puddin's well-known 'goal' it is this McClarren Meat outfit. They will probably ride Oliver from the go hoping to send him into the ozone with his speed ball.

The McClarren game is the only one on the remainder of the schedule for the Straw-board which is expected to test that outfit with the possible exception of the Mecca Restaurant.

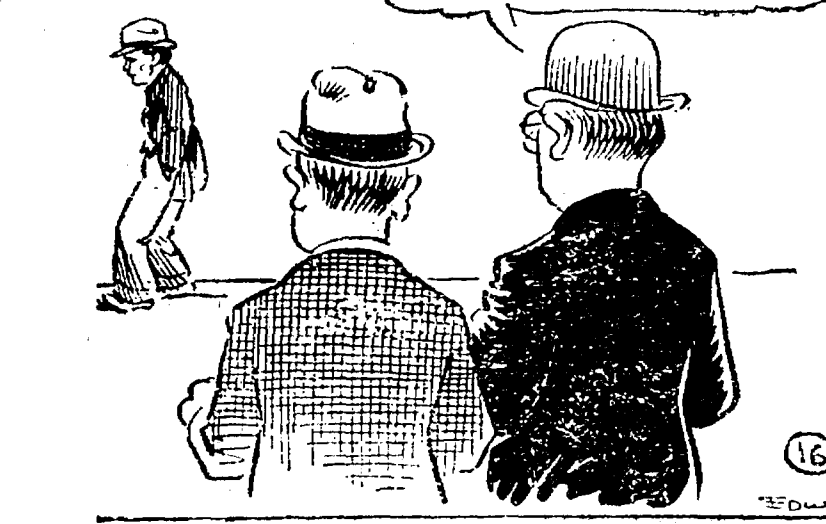

Other games of the week find the Given Oils and Eshelman Feeds mixing on Monday evening, Circleville Oils and Circle City Dairy on Tuesday evening and Mecca Restaurant and Purina Chows on Wednesday evening, or afternoon, it not yet being determined.

The old ball league is going along in nice shape with the Straw-board and Mecca Restaurant outfits the only ones undefeated. The first half will end when every team has played every other team once. Then the second half begins.

White Qualifies In Four Events

Howard White, Ohio Wesleyan's one-man track team, kept his school in the running for the Buckeye Athletic association title, Friday afternoon, by qualifying in four events.

They include 100-yard dash, 220-yard dash, 120-yard high hurdles, and 220-yard low hurdles. Running true to form, Miami university, favorite had qualified seven men in the preliminaries. Finals are to be run today.

Ohio University, defending champion, became more than a threat, however, by qualifying eight men.

Ames Oliver, Miami Negro sophomore, qualified in both hurdles. Bob Ulrich, of Ohio Wesleyan, turned in the best time in the high hurdles, winning his heat in 15.8 seconds while Oliver coasted in to a 16.3 second win in the other heat.

Gene Broxon, Ohio University flash, turned in the surprise performance of the day by winning the 100-yard dash in 10 seconds flat and by capturing the 220 in 27.7 seconds.

As the teams entered the finals today, Miami still remained the favorite to win the championship, although Ohio University may nose in again this year. Wesleyan is generally conceded third place and Marshall and Cincinnati probably will battle for fourth.

Chicago Team Bumps New York With Earnshaw on Hill; Boston Drubbed.

NEW YORK, May 26.—For years and years, the National league had the close races while one or two clubs were fighting it out for the American league pennant with the rest nowhere.

But this year the pendulum has swung the other way and today we find the league-leading Yankees under the .600 mark and the tail-end White Sox at .400. In the National league today exactly 400 points separates the Pirates at .533 and the Reds at .233.

The Pirates already are 12 full games ahead of the Reds while the Yankees are only six in front of the White Sox, and few days ago the Yankees buried in the second division and the Chicago entry up in the first division.

If the Yankees continue as they've been going lately they'll land in the basement with a thud. They dropped another to the White Sox yesterday, 7 to 5, when George Earnshaw outpitched George Uhle, Danny Mac Payden and Van Atta. The Yankees have now dropped three straight series in the west and have lost seven of their last nine games, and Owner Jake Ruppert's means may be heard from the battery to the Bronx.

The fast stepping Indians bounced Rhodes, Pennock and Johnson around for 24 hits to outpace the Red Sox that they really needed Wes Ferrell who the Indians traded to the Red Sox yesterday. With that kind of hitting back of aim Pearson merely breezed along to win 18 to 3.

REPORT OF CITY LIBRARIAN

The library staff consists of Mary Wilder, librarian; Leola Warner first assistant from January to August; Gretchen Moeller first assistant from September to December; Wilmina Phebus, second assistant; Jessie Cummings, substitute; Ralph E. Roby, janitor.

Report of the Librarian to the Board of trustees of the Circleville Public Library—1933.

As Librarian, I have the honor to submit herewith the sixtieth annual report of the Circleville Public Library.

The last three years have produced the most intensive use of public libraries ever known in this country. Our library has, during this period, enrolled increasing numbers of new borrowers, and the circulation of books has reached its greatest heights. During the past year, a few libraries have reported slight decreases in the number of books issued, but our library has not only maintained the high circulation rate of 1931 and 1932, but has shown a substantial increase. Cards have been issued to more new borrowers than have been recorded in any other year.

The resources of the library have been drawn upon more fully, and books and other property have been subject to strenuous use. The result of the rigid economies, practiced during this period, are showing in the condition of all library property. As few replacements have been made, books have continued in service long after they have reached a condition in which additional mending was economical or practical. No new furniture, or other equipment, has been added during the year, and no repairs have been made on the equipment already on hand.

The increase in work has been handled by the regular staff, though many functions of the library have been curtailed by lack of time for their furtherance.

No inventory was taken during the last year, and only a partial one in 1931. Though over 1,300 more books were repaired, in the library than during the preceding year, an accumulation of several hundred volumes remained on hand to start the repair work in a new year.

The card catalog, begun in 1900, has been kept up-to-date, with all additions to the library, but needs revision and the replacement of soiled and worn cards and guides. At the close of the year, considerable material for the information file remained to be sorted and classified.

The regular cleaning schedule, previously in force, was given up during the last year. In May, the library was given a thorough and much needed cleaning. Since that time, no method has been adopted for this care of library property. It is now urgent that a definite system, or plan, for this work should be arranged.

The care and upkeep of the building presents increasing difficulties. For several years, repairs have not been included in the provisions of either the city or library budgets. Plastering,

LAWSON LITTLE WINS 'AMATEUR'

PRESTWICK, Scotland, May 26.—W. Lawson Little, after being a critic a few weeks ago as "just another Stanford student," today won the British amateur championship by shooting some of the greatest golf ever seen in competition.

Little defeated James Wallace, the unemployed Scotch carpenter who himself was generally unknown a week ago, by 14 up and 13 to go.

Shooting a blazing 33-33 for a 66 in his morning round to give him a lead of 12 up. Little went out in the afternoon determined to bring the match to a speedy conclusion and this he did in decisive fashion. It required only five holes for him to close out the little Scot in the afternoon.

Our idea of a just grievance is that of the man whose sentence lasts longer than the law he violated.

The new cars may overcome air resistance, but what they need just now is some gadget to overcome customer resistance.

and carpentry work are greatly needed.

ADMINISTRATION

The Board of Trustees held twelve regular and four special sessions during the year. Matters for special consideration included the resolutions commemorating the services of Mr. H. F. Folsom as a member of this Board, a district meeting of the Ohio Library Association, held in Circleville on June 6; financial questions; and a change on the library staff.

The financial situation of the libraries of the state was subject of importance during the year, particularly during the times in which the legislature was in session. A law, which was adopted, made provisions for the support of public libraries, which involved an extension of library privileges. Action of the Board was taken on this point and a resolution passed, and presented to the City Council for approval, extending library service to county, as well as city, residents.

The resignation of Miss Leola Warner, first assistant librarian, was presented to the Board and acted upon at a special meeting, in August. Miss Warner was a member of the training class, organized in this library, the summer of 1924, and became a member of the staff in the following January. At the resignation of Miss Elizabeth Drum, in 1927, Miss Warner, after completing a short course of training at Western Reserve university library school, was appointed first assistant.

The Board, in filling this vacancy, was fortunate in securing Miss Gretchen Moeller, whose qualifications are especially adapted to the needs of this library.

HOME USE OF BOOKS

The total number of books, and other material, loaned for home and school use, numbered 53,082 items, including books, pamphlets, clippings, maps and pictures. Increases in numbers issued were shown in all classes of books except general literature (poetry, drama and essays), history, and rental books. A detailed report on books issued is included with this summary.

The number of books issued to juveniles while more stationary than the number issued to adults, shows a gradual increase during the last four years. Ten years ago, the books issued were almost equally divided between adult and juvenile readers, since that time, there has been an increase of 143 per cent in the number of books issued annually on the cards of adult patrons.

The registration of many new borrowers accounts for much of the increase in adult reading, but many persons, formerly only occasional patrons, are now regular visitors to, and borrowers from the library.

The character of many of the book being most read, and the information which the library is called upon to supply, shows clearly the part to be taken in present day economic and social adjustments.

Books on social science and practical philosophy have been of special interest, and, among the new books added to the library, during the year, books of this type have been much in demand. Information on industrial subjects has been supplied to individual inquiries, as fully as our resources made possible.

BOOK SUPPLY

The number of volumes, now listed in our book stock, is 26,432. During the year 672 volumes were added and 278 withdrawn.

As a complete inventory has not been made for two years, further reduction in number may be anticipated, although there have, apparently, been fewer losses than in other years.

The deterioration in the condition of the books of our library has also been very great and the discarding of many volumes is imminent.

The largest number of books, ever repaired in the library, were mended by the staff, during 1933. The total number was 6,749, in addition to which, 192 volumes were returned.

Of the books added, 13 were reference books, 61 bound magazines, 239 juveniles, and 350 in the general circulating collection, and 6 in the permanent loan of the D. A. R. The total number was the smallest in many years, the average for the last five years having been 822, and for the preceding five years, 976.

The sources of our additions for the year were—432 from the regular book fund, four added by the Marcus A. Brown Library; 105 transferred from the Rental Collection; 50 received as gifts; 66 by binding and 15 from all other sources.

A generous gift of books from Miss Elizabeth J. Ruggles was the largest single gift received during the year.

BORROWERS

The five-year plan of registering borrowers has now completed its first cycle, during which, 2,572 new borrowers were enrolled, and 1,842 old card holders re-registered, a total of 4,414, from which the 1,067 registrations of 1929 will be withdrawn during the coming year.

In order to estimate the proportional increase during the coming year, it is planned to keep a separate registration of county and city borrowers. At the close of 1933, there were, approximately 250 active cards held by non resident borrowers.

All residents of Circleville, who have not re-registered since 1929, will be, in future, credited as new borrowers. Although they may have had cards at some time, previous to that date.

The fee of $1.00 per year, charged to non-residents, is being continued in the case of patrons from outside of Pickaway-co.

The library has also, each year, a number of transient patrons, who make a security deposit for books borrowed. In such cases no fee is charged.

Considering the few examples of library architecture available, when our building was planned, the rooms of the Public Library have served well, during the forty-two years of their occupancy.

Within fifteen years after moving into the Memorial hall and Public Library building, the library had increased, in number of books and patrons, to the limit of the capacity provided.

After having been badly handicapped by lack of room, for a number of years, when the Marcus A. Brown bequest became available, in 1916, more space and equipment became imperative. By action of the City Council, the remainder of the first floor, included in the 99 years lease, held by the city, was made available. By means of a bond issue for this purpose, an architect was employed and the rooms reconstructed for the use of the library.

Besides the additional book room, the conversion of the old stack room provided a much needed reference room, additional space for the smaller children, and better arrangements for the circulation desk. Display cases and other equipment, provided at this time, greatly facilitated all of the work of the library.

Every part of this added accommodation is now fully used and the needs of the future should now be an important consideration. The normal growth of the library, new demands and new opportunities, added to the intention to give service to all residents of the county, enlarged all types of use made of the library plant.

USED FOR MEETINGS

As a local center for many meetings, the library trustees' room is much used. Besides the regular meetings of the trustees and of the Monday club, the newly organized Pickaway-co Garden club has been meeting here during the year. Committees, civic and study groups have used the room on many occasions and have brought about contacts of special value to the library.

Needs of the present, to be worked out in plans for the future, demand increased shelf room for books and periodicals, fire proof protection for many valuable possessions. The increase in books during the past ten years has been about 300 volumes per year, requiring, at least, an additional hundred feet of shelving, each year.

Many periodicals, permanently useful, require more room, than is now available, for proper handling and accessibility. The preserving and binding of local newspapers is a duty of the library, long neglected. Fire proof storage for irreplaceable property should be provided, the present lack of such insurance depriving the library of many valuable gifts, each year.

Provisions for the accommodation of readers are decreasing, over half of the chairs provided for the general reading room are no longer usable, and have been removed for repairs or replacement.

LIBRARY ACTIVITIES

With the largest circulation of books, corresponding increases in book mending, reference work, and other duties of the library staff, less time was available for outside activities, the preparation of publicity material, or other promotional projects.

The librarian worked with the program and other committees, of several organizations, and gave an informal talk, on library activities, at a club meeting. Assistance was also given to the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, and others, working for the civic and social welfare of the community.

The meeting of the Ohio Library Association in Columbus, in April, was attended by our Librarian, who had a part on the program at one of the sessions. Miss Warner and Miss Phebus each spent a day at the convention and Mr. Groce, Miss Moodie and Mrs. Jeffries attended the conference of the Library Trustees' association. At the election of officers of the Library Association, our library was recognized in the choice of vice-presidents.

Circleville was selected for a district meeting of the Ohio Library Association, which was held on June 6. Excellent speakers, on timely and important topics, furnished the program. Our president, Mr. Groce, extended the welcome to our visitors, and a number of organizations and citizens cooperating in making the session a success. A luncheon at "The Bogg" and a trip to Logan Elm were social features of the day. At the luncheon, Mr. Daley gave a short talk about the historical old hotel and the scenes to be visited on the drive.

In the early summer, Miss Warner and Miss Phebus spent a few days at the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The survey of the year brings to mind the indebtedness of the library to the cooperative spirit and support which have been accorded from many sources.

Acknowledgments are especially due to the officials of city and county, who have, with us given consideration to legislative and financial questions, and to the civic, patriotic and social organizations which have contributed their support.

Thanks are due to the Circleville Publishing Co. for many courtesies and for the satisfactory way in which library news has been treated in its newspapers. During the year this service has brought to the library many appreciative comments.

While the number of gifts received has been less than in other years, the character of books received was high. The largest gift, that of Miss Elizabeth J. Ruggles, was a most pleasing addition to the many expressions of interest in this library, which have been shown by Miss Ruggles with the gift, an artistic book plate has been provided, to fittingly mark this, and other gifts from the good friend of the Circleville library.

Other gifts of books and magazines, and special help in other ways,

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO

Stanley went each day to the little bookshop. She had found a real pleasure in her work. Customers were few and in the dimness and quiet of the old shop Stanley found much time to dip into the books which lined the walls quite to the low ceiling. At first she was a wanderer in their midst, but gradually certain books began to emerge and mean something to her. She learned in a surprisingly short time how to put her hand on nearly any volume in the place. She found a pre-genuine pleasure in selling a book she had read and loved, to a person who would share her delight in it. And if she found this association with the old books pleasant, it was enlivened and enhanced by the presence of Felix Rose. He said little, but Stanley learned to listen gravely to what he did say, to remember it afterward. She began to think him a rather splendid old man, and she wanted John Harmon to know him. She thought he had something that John Harmon needed—a repose, an impartial judgment, a simple understanding. He had lived with books and men—and he had learned to discriminate among both, very wisely. He had learned what to discard and what to cherish. Stanley envied him this sense of value, which comes only with age—and not always then; she envied him his serenity which she so much desired and which seemed always to be eluding her.

She had come very near to happiness in these months since her marriage but now she moved in the shadow of John Harmon's depression. Try though he might, and he did try hard, he could not shake him from her fact that the book was not coming on as it should, and because it wasn't things could not be as gay and beautifully right as they had been in those weeks before Christmas when life had come so strangely sweet and uncomplicated.

And all the time Stanley was thinking about something and trying not to at the same time. She thought of it while she was putting the kettle on to boil, while she was walking through winter sunlight or gloom to work, while she was lying sleepless in bed listening to the now frenzied, now stumbling click of John Harmon's typewriter. He said he could not write a "smart novel about smart people" and never see any, never know any—never move among them. Well, Stanley knew where to find smart people—the kind of people John Harmon wanted to know, the kind he had come to New York to know, the kind he had developed such an uncanny flair for writing about and had tried to put into a book and was slowly breaking his heart because he wasn't succeeding. She knew them. She had only to make the effort and she could easily get in touch with them. There were Perry Devereux, thought of Perry and Nigel Stern. She did so well, of Marcia and her dinner parties, of Nigel Stern and his beautiful studies of Dennis St. John and her clever drawings—all this she could give John Harmon. Perry would come at a word from her, Marcia would find a young author interesting table garnishment. Nigel Stern would, perhaps, welcome them more casually, but no less delightfully.

But all this meant going back; going back where things had hurt her so. It meant, perhaps, seeing him again. She was not sure she wanted to see Drew again—ever. Was not sure just what would happen to her if she did. She had found happiness and peace and security with John Harmon and she clung to them fiercely, hating to risk them; dreading to face what she was not sure of, what she did not venture even to think about.

But she loved John Harmon and his peace of mind was precious to her. Finally it became more precious to her than her own—which she could not have anyway—so she sat down and wrote to Perry Devereux. She told him quite simply what had happened to her—about her love for John Harmon and their life together and the book John Harmon was writing. She asked him to come to tea—she set a date. Perry's reply was immediate and exactly like him.

"I shall surely be with you on Tuesday. I am very anxious to meet the man who did all the things for you I couldn't do, though I wanted to so much. He must clearly understand that I've always been in love with you and still am, and that I respect his right to you, and that as long as he can make you happy I shall never interfere."

"Yours devotedly, Perry."

Stanley showed John Harmon the letter and said, "I wrote and asked him to come to tea—he's a very old and good friend of mine. I hope you will like each other."

John Harmon read the letter and grinned appreciatively. "It's practically a challenge but I accept it! Have him to tea by all means—I will be glad to know somebody like him. That's what I need, Stanley—mental stimulus, contact with new and keen personalities. I'm starved for it. I always have been. That's why you were a godsend to me, last summer—you still are, precious." He stopped to put his arms about her, hold her close, his lips against her hair, "but you're now—now you're no longer outside, you're inside, close to my heart. Do you know what I mean, Stanley?"

"Yes, I know," And she smiled at him through a blur of sudden tears and pressed her face against his shoulder.

"Perry," Stanley gave him both her hands.

"Hello, darling, it's great seeing you again."

"And you, Perry. I've wanted to—many times."

"Then why—"

"Never mind that now." She took his hat and stick and smiled at him with eyes that somehow continued to both laugh and weep, so mixed was the emotion in them. "Don't be nearly a year."

"Don't know, darling? Let me look at you."

She stood quite still in front of him, straight and slim in a dull blue dress. Her hair lay in the same smooth waves revealing the beautiful curve of her head; her eyes met his with the same clear, friendly understanding. He stared at her with lazily smiling, half-closed blue eyes and found her not so very different—more lovely perhaps, with a more complete charm, a more fulfilled beauty.

"That'll do," he said, turning away abruptly. "Even a cat may look at a king—but not too long. Charmin' room you have here, perfectly delightful."

Outside, a cold rain, half sleet, half snow, beat against the window-panes and froze there. Inside, a fire burned on the hearth, the blue candles were lighted against the thickening twilight and the room lay serene and beautiful in their mellow glow. Stanley had bought primroses and set them in black pots on the deep window-sills. She had placed the tea-table close to the fire and laid out the pink tea cups and the pewter teapot. She had drawn the wing chair up beside the tea-table and balanced it with her own little slat-back rocker, which had come down to them for Christmas from the attic in Vermont.

"I love it. I've been very happy here, Perry."

"Yes, one can believe that."

They sat down in front of the fire. It was very quiet in the room—the shadows closed about them gently, the fire leaped and danced on the hearth.

"And the husband, Stanley, are you going to produce him?"

"Of course. But I wanted a little time with you first. He'll be in shortly—you'll like him, Perry—he's sort of wonderful."

"He must be—to make you look like that." And then Perry remembered another man who had made her look, if not exactly like that then near enough.

"And what of Drew, Stanley? Is that over?"

"I don't know, Perry."

She met his eyes directly. "I've tried to think it was not when I married John Harmon but since, during these last few months, but I can't be sure; perhaps I'll never be sure."

"Is that why you haven't let me see you?"

"Yes, I didn't want to be reminded of things—things I was trying to forget."

"And now?"

"It's John Harmon, you see. I'm going to be quite honest with you, Perry—I've never been anything else. I've been very happy here alone; I haven't needed anything more—but John Harmon has. That's why I wrote to you."

"And I have been called in to supply them, I suppose," drawled Perry lighting a cigarette carefully.

"Will you mind so very much, my dear? Just dropping in, now and then, having tea with us?"

Perry set down his teacup, reached for her hand, held it lightly but firmly between his. "Forgive me, Stanley, that was very young of me. You know I'll do anything I can now that you've let me find you again. But, first, you must promise to come back when you belong. It's silly of you, Stanley, and a little stupid to continue to run away from things. You can't do it forever, you know. Hide in some lovely old room like this, tucked away from everybody. Some day you'll have to come back. And I can't believe you'll find it so hard. You look very happy, Stanley, and very sure of yourself."

"I am, Perry, to a certain extent. Beyond that—" She shrugged, smiled at him a little wistfully. "I wonder does one ever know just how sure they are of things?"

COLUMBUS, May 26.—Charges that officers of the state liquor control department have been using the means of "entrapment" to arrest liquor law violators were vehemently denied here today by Edmund G. Matthews, chief of the enforcement division of the liquor department.

"Our officers are thoroughly acquainted with the federal statute concerning 'entrapment' and we do not have to use this means to do our duty," he declared.

THE MOVIES

AT THE CLIFTONA

An underwater battle between a man and a crocodile at a depth of more than thirty feet will be shown on the screen for the first time in "Tarzan and His Mate," the thrilling adventure story to be shown Sunday, Monday and Tuesday at the Cliftona Theatre. Johnny Weissmuller is one of the combatants.

In the new picture, directed by Cedric Gibbons, the swimming champion was required to plunge into a river with a man-eating "crocodile" for a scene in which he saves the life of Maureen O'Sullivan.

To photograph the strange battle a special camera device was constructed to penetrate water depths. The resulting action will provide many gasps in addition to the thrills of elephant charges, battles with lions, rhinoceroses, charges, giant apes, and other jungle denizens to be included in the picture.

Appearing in the cast with Weissmuller and Miss O'Sullivan are Neil Hamilton, Paul Cavanaugh, Forrester Harvey, Doris Lloyd, William Stack, Desmond Roberts and Nathan Curry. The story is based on the famous fictional character created by Edgar Rice Burroughs.

AT THE GRAND

When Joan Blondell was unable to get to her studio to take a scene for a picture because she was just recuperating from an appendicitis operation, the studio went to her.

While working in the Warner Bros. production, "I've Got Your Number," which comes to the Grand Theatre on Sunday, she was stricken with acute appendicitis, but went gamely on with her work until the picture was finished and then went to the hospital for an operation. Three weeks after the operation it was found necessary to remake one of the scenes.

Thrive in the Arctic

The only domestic animal bred profitably in the Arctic regions is the reindeer, because it requires neither hay for feed nor shelter for protection. There are more than 125,000,000 of them, and it is not uncommon for single breeders in Arctic Siberia to own herds of 10,000 at a time.

The Value of Mathematics

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the first in a series of articles by the Journalism class of Circleville High School, which will be of use to the students in their selection of a course for next school term. The last in this series of articles, written by Fred Watts on Sciences, will appear in the last issue of The Red and Black next Saturday.

By Miss Margaret Mattinson.

Can the value of an education, whether liberal or professional, be expressed in dollars and cents? It seems that we are apt to attempt this impossibility?

True enough, we do not wish to pursue those branches of study which would actually retard us in our forward march—but are there any such in our high school curricula?

Let us consider for a moment the occupations or professions in which the study of mathematics is essential. Most of the professions require elementary algebra, and many of them geometry and intermediate algebra. Among these are the various engineering professions, medicine, scientific research, pharmacy, aeronautics, architecture, interior decorating, designing, navigation—in fact the list is a long one.

We are all anxious that our young people pursue those studies which will be of use to them in earning a livelihood; which will tend to give them a broader outlook on life; which will enable them to be more interesting and companionable associates; which will lift them to higher ideals; which will lead them to a fuller, more abundant life; in all, those which will result in their being nobler and more worthy citizens.

In these days of keen competition in a highly commercialized and specialized civilization, most of us are too prone to stress the material requisites and to lose sight of the others.

It is perfectly true that Mary may never solve an algebraic equation, construct a geometric figure, or translate a Latin sentence a single time after she emerges from the second year of high school. It is equally probable that John may never be required to make a piece of furniture, after spending several years learning to do this in school, or tell the construction of a certain part of a house.

But are those sufficient reasons why we should advise all the Marys and Johns to elect different courses than these?

Haven't these two gained something, tangible or intangible, from these studies, the contacts they have made, and the good habits they have formed while pursuing them—or some lesson of life which they may use in later years?

The sciences, biological or non-biological, are almost unintelligible to us unless we know something of its language, its workings, its symbolism.

The very world about us is full of symmetry and proportion—the fundamental laws of which are to be found in our study of mathematics.

Each course in high school has its excellent points and its drawbacks.

However, there seems to be a general opinion among those engaged in different occupations, that as a sound basis for any profession or work, the classical studies afford the best.

"Dirty Jack"

There was one little Jack, not very long back,
And it's said to his lasting disgrace,
That he never was seen with his hands at all clean,
Nor yet ever clean was his face.

His friends were much hurt to see so much dirt,
And often and well did they scold,
But all was in vain, he was dirty again
Before they had done it an hour.

When to wash he was sent, he reluctantly went,
With water to splash himself o'er,
But he left the black streaks all over his cheeks,
And made them look worse than before.

The pigs in the dirt couldn't be more expert
Than Jack was at grubbing about,
And people have thought, this young gentleman ought
To've been made with four legs and a snout.

The idle and bad may unto this lad
Be dirty and black, to be sure;
But good boys are seen to be decent and clean,
Although they be ever so poor.

—Pauline Crosby,
Seventh Grade, Corwin St.

CIRCLEVILLE HIGH SCHOOL RECOGNIZED AS FIRST CLASS

ANNUAL BANQUET PLANS COMPLETE

Seniors, Supt. Daley, Faculty,
Board of Education To Be Guests of Juniors.

The invitation committee with Margie Merz, chairman, early this week issued the formal invitations to the Junior-Senior banquet. As an innovation each faculty member this year has been invited to bring a guest.

The decoration and seating committees have been diligently working this week. The decorators have both the Coffee Shoppe and the Parish house to decorate this year.

This committee is headed by Otis Mader and includes Kathryn Chaffin, Elizabeth Dowden, James Lyle, Doris Moffitt, and George Speakman.

The banquet will be at the New American Coffee Shoppe at 6:30. Dancing will begin at 9:00 o'clock at the St. Philip's Parish house.

Guests besides the seniors will include the members of the Board of Education and their wives, Supt. E. L. Daley, and the faculty. As before, freshman girls have been chosen to serve. This year those selected are Charlotte Cook, Faye Elliott, Mary Crites, Ruby Chaffin, June West, Rosemary Metzger, and Jessie Dresbach.

These girls were chosen by the banquet committee from the Home Economics class.

STUDENTS PRESENT "TREASURE ISLAND"

The pupils of C. H. S. were taken to "Treasure Island" Tuesday when that well-known romance was presented in chapel by a group of Freshman girls.

The star of the performance was Nana Cooper as "Long John Silver." She not only spoke her long lines well, but she lived the character.

Others in the cast were Mary Crites, Beatrice Dowden, Esther Garrett, Audrey Martin, Mary Catherine Trump, and Marjorie Westenhaver.

The cast are members of Miss Rain's English class.

The announcer was Lucille Heise.

Sport Items

This is the banner year for the Sophs in athletics!

The second year men have swept everything before them, taking the banners in volleyball, baseball, and track.

A new type of championship banner is to be given this year to the winners in intramural sports.

Instead of individual sport awards as in previous years one banner only will be presented with the name of each sport and the winner.

This is the year that volleyball and track awards have been made, as in previous years boys' and girls' basketball were recognized for banner awards.

Golf letters are now a possibility for Circleville high golfers.

If the Tigers annex the Central league championship today at the Walnut Cliffs country club golf letters will be a reality.

Chances, according to Coach Herberholz, are excellent for coping the championship.

John Jenkins, Joe Jenkins, Bob Freese, and Tink Hill are representing C. H. S. today.

GLEE CLUB PLANS PICNIC THURSDAY

As the first social affair of any sort of the Special glee club, the members and their guests will have a picnic at Dewey park Thursday, May 31.

The Special glee club is composed of the members of the boys' and girls' glee clubs.

Betty Barnes, Stanley Melvin, Margie Merz, Eleanor Miller, and George Roth make up the "cats" committee.

The attendance committee includes Lydia Given, Bernice Liston, and Ethel Stonerock.

Those in charge of the transportation are Margie Brown, Mark Mader, and Catherine Stevens.

A pair of the members of the faculty will accompany the group.

Member of North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools For 31 Years.

For the 31st consecutive year Circleville high school has been recognized as a member of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

The following is a quotation received from Joseph W. Fichter, chairman of the State committee: "At the annual meeting of the North Central Association, held in Chicago April 18-21, of Ohio's 311 North Central schools 239 were Unqualifiedly Recommended, 57 were Warned, and 15 were Advised. I am happy to inform you that the Circleville High School is among those Unqualifiedly Recommended."

This certifies that Circleville high school is a first grade high school.

SCHOOL ACTIVITIES TO BE RECOGNIZED

Assembly Program Monday To Honor Athletes, Band Members.

The annual Recognition Assembly of the high school has been set for Monday, May 28.

Featuring this assembly will be the awarding of basketball and track letters.

Recognition will also be given to various intramural champions. These include the sophomores in track, baseball and volleyball; the Senior class in boys' basketball; and the Sophomore girls in basketball.

Band members who received letters will also be honored. Although the band letters have been awarded this was not done publicly.

To complete the Recognition program several scholarships will be awarded.

This is one of the year's outstanding assemblies.

Monday's program is scheduled for the eighth period.

Installs Officers

At the Hi-Y meeting which was held Tuesday, May 22, five new officers were installed.

The newly elected officials include Tom Kiewin, president; Otis Mader, vice-president; George Speakman, secretary; Jim Henderson, treasurer; and Fred Grant, sergeant-at-arms.

As delegates to the Hi-Y convention to be held at Camp Campbell Gard, near Hamilton, Ohio, the club elected Dick Plum, James Henderson, and Loren Carothers. The club will pay the camp registration fee.

BANDS TO PLAY MEMORIAL DAY

The Junior and Senior bands have been engaged to play for the Circleville Memorial Day exercises, May 30.

Both organizations played last year.

Mr. Zaenglein was present at rehearsal Tuesday. The popular director was released from the hospital a couple of weeks ago, and has been steadily improving.

Mr. Gill had charge of the band at the rehearsal at the Parish house.

STUDENT "WORKS" OVERTIME AT C.H.S.

ONE of the brethren in our midst has become a popular lounge in Principal Gephart's "colossal palace."

It seems as though Jim Lyle has been working quite a bit overtime with his "40 and 8" ninth periods.

This is not exactly according to the NRA code, but Jim is certainly "doing his part" under Mr. Gephart's code of "better ethics."

Sir Jim has found that Principal Gephart and not Gen. Hugh S. Johnson of the NRA is running the ninth period part of his extra-curricular activities.

At the rate that Jim is "serving his time," 1914 may dawn before he gets out of the "big house."

In fact by the time the honorable Mr. Lyle has finished this extra course of activities in his high school career there may be among the residents of Circleville a lot of "little Lyles" who proudly call the hero of this tale "Grandpa."

THEATRE INSTALLS AIR CONDITIONER

After three weeks of steady work by a crew of eight men Harry Clifton, owner and manager of the Cliftona Theatre, today is heralding the completion of an air washer and purifier which has been installed in his moving picture house in Pinckney-st.

Installation of the purifier was under the supervision of Otto Gluth, who has installed 52 similar plants for the Paramount-Publix Corp. in several south western states.

STARTS TODAY

Operation of the new plant started with this afternoon's show and will be in continuous operation throughout the summer. It purifies and washes the air, and the air is changed in the theater every minute. This is done through a series of operations which includes bringing water from a well, dug at the rear of the theater, the compression of the water to a certain pressure, then being fed through spray nozzles against baffles. These baffles are so arranged that the heat of the outside air is carried off and the cool, purified, washed air is distributed through the theater by newly installed blowers. After entering the theater the air is controlled by a series of arrangements which distributes the washed and purified air evenly throughout the house.

The management insists that this new unit not be confused with a refrigeration system, as, in the nature of an air purifier, this system is recommended by doctors throughout the country as the most healthful cooling unit known. Quoting Mr. Gluth the plant will lower the temperature 20 degrees inside the show house and he adds that no town of this size within a radius of 200 miles has similar equipment and that few large cities can equal the present arrangement of the Cliftona. He adds that this equipment puts the local theater on a par with the largest cities in the country in the matter of air-conditioning.

With this news comes the announcement of the new summer prices of the theater, 10c and 18c at matinees and 10c and 25c evening. The theater will continue the same quality shows as in the past having arranged bookings with Paramount, M-G-M, United Artists and other leading producers.
